MINISTER AT THE FUNERAL DECLARES:

"TUCKER COULD NOT HAVE KILLED GIRL"

Great Throng Weeps at Bier of Young Man Electrocuted for Murder of Mabel Page---Room Banked With Floral Tributes, Mostly Sent by Women---Sister Faints During the Services.

An unprecedenteed scene took placeto-day at the funeral of Charles Louis Tucker, who was put to death for the murder of Mabel Page, at the Tucker home in Auburndale.

Probably never before in this country was the funeral of a person who had been executed for murder attended by so many people who went to the stricken home as mourners and as sympathizers with his family

Standing near the casket containing the body of Tucker, the Rev. William Copley Winslow, who had charge of the service, gave it as his "careful, conscientious and decisive conviction" that Tucker did not and could not have killed Mabel Page.

When the clergyman spoke these words in an earnest and impressive manner there was a great hush in and about the house. It was broken by the soft sobbing of scores of the women who had gathered there because of their own convictions in the young man's innocence.

During the service, Mrs. Walter Tucker, who had been ill and who insisted on getting out of bed so that she might be present, fainted. She was carried to another room, revived and helped back to bed.

Pastor Prays That Tucker Be Blessed in His Innocence

Charles Louis Tucker, I thank God that your troubles are over. I visited and saw you and felt your change of heart, while listening to your future hopes and to your story of the acts of your past life.

Once I believed you guilty, but now I believe—and I know—that you were innocent. I pray for the blessing of God upon you and those left behind.—Rev. Thomas W. Bishop's prayer at Tucker's bier.

Victim of Circumstances.

The Rev. Mr. Winslow asserted that Tucker was the victim of circumstances, that he was prosecuted with almost superhuman vigor and subtlety, and that he was unfavorably regarded by some of the jurors and others.

The service began at 10:30 and lasted about half an hour. It was a very affecting one and there were few dry eyes in the house when it was concluded. Prior to the beginning of the service every available foot of space in all of the rooms on the lower floor, the stairway, the veranda in front and the front yard was occupied by the hundreds of men and women in attendance.

The greater part of the throng was compose of women, and the men present were usually young, among them being a number of the former friends of the dead young man.

Great Banks of Flowers.

The floral tributes were very numerous and very beautiful. So many of them were there that they could not be taken care of in the front parlor where the body was. They were arranged in great banks about the casket, and those that could not be placed there were left in an adjoining room. There were many bunches of fine roses, and the air was filled with their fragrance.

Just before the service began the clergyman requested all those but the immediate friends of the family to go out of the house and remain on the veranda and in the yard if they so desired. This was done, and there were about 300 men and women who waited outside of the house until the service was concluded. There were about thirty people in the house during the service.

At 11:15 o'clock the body was carried out to the hearse and taken to the Riverside railway station, where it was placed on the 11:35 train for Worcester for interment in Hope Cemetery.

Bearers Four Young Men.

The pall-bearers were W. Walter Ash, W. Waterman, Frank M. Fay and Walter Tucker. Those who accompanied the body were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tucker, the parents of the young man; Mr. and Mrs. Adam Horle, Mr. and Mrs. William Peel and the Rev. Mr. Winslow.

The service began by a reading from the Scriptures, "I am the Resurrection and the Life." The hymn, "Who Are These in Bright Array?" was sung. The Rev. Mr. Winslow then made his address. It is printed in full in another column.

After the address the clergyman repeated the Lord's Prayer and made the following special prayer:

> "O Lord Jesus Christ, against whom false witnesses rose up, by thy most holy example of perfect patience and humility, strengthen and support, we entreat thee, all persons unjustly accused or condemned. Comfort them in the everpresent thought that thou knowest the whole truth and wilt in thine own good time make their righteous-

AUTO CAUSES PANIC AT GIRL'S FUNERAL

Driving his automobile through the funeral cortege escorting the body of Miss Mary Noonan to St. Joseph's Cemetery, at Lynn, early to-day, Samuel W. Clapp of No. 252 Ocean avenue, prominent society man, frightened the team attached to the second carriage of family mourners so badly that the animals dashed into a fence, tore their harness to shreds, and in their struggles threw the procession into a panic. The hearse was some distance ahead, but all of the carriages were jammed together, the horses rearing and plunging and the women occupants shrieking in terror.

No one was seriously injured, but a pause of over a quarter of an hour was necessary while a new vehicle was obtained to substitute the carriage behind the runaway horses, which was badly damaged.

With Clapp were two friends and a chauffeur. The funeral cortege was traversing the street toward which his automobile was headed, and the street was for the moment deserted so that it might have free passage. Unheeding the shouts of the crowd on the walk, Clapp directed his chauffeur to head the machine across the street directly through the cortege. The driver dashed between the first two of the family carriages, and in an instant all was confusion. As the machine whizzed by the team attached to the second vehicle jerked loose from its driver's hands and made for the fence on the opposite of the street. Both animals were thrown to their haunches when they dashed against the fence, but although severely shaken the occupants of the carriage were not injured.

What action will be brought against Clapp has not been determined.

Explosion and Fire on Liner at Liverpool

SIX DEAD BY BOMB

Four Bodies Already Recovered. More Than Forty Injured in Evident Plot.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LIVERPOOL, June 14.—Nine are dead and forty injured in an explosion on the Haverford, of the International Navigation line, at her dock here to-day.

It is believed that the explosion was due to a bomb placed in the cargo by Anarchists.

No passengers were aboard the steamship at the time. She sailed from Philadelphia on June 2. Her passengers were disembarked yesterday.

The Haverford is one of the Morgan International Mercantile Marine vessels.

At the time of the explosion the ship was in the hands of the stevedores. They had just removed the hatches when, without the slightest warning, a terrific shock scattered them in every direction.

Some of the mutilated forms were blown as high as the mastheads and fell into the water.

Indescribable scenes were faced by the rescuers. The ship immediately took fire.

All the dead bodies have been recovered. In th hospitals are twenty-six men, some of whom can live but a short time.

It has been discovered that the force of th explosion was downward, which leads the authorities to believe that anarchists are responsible for the outrage.

Had the explosion occurred when the Haverford was in mideocean, it is probable that her fate would never have become known.

An investigation is now being made to determine how many men were aboard the ship. It is not known whether any of the Haverford's officers are among the lost.

The fire spread rapidly and burned for two hours before it was extinguished. The cargo consisted largely of linseed oil cake and it burned fiercely. A great deal of damage was caused to the vessel and cargo.

It was at first feared that some of the men were caught in the hold. As soon as the flames had been somewhat subdued, firemen, with smoke helmets, were sent below to search for other victims.

The explosion occurred at 8 o'clock and by 10 o'clock the fire was reported out.

The Haverford is a modern twin-screw ship of 7,493 tons. She was launched from the yards of John Brown & Co., Clydebank, Scotland, September, 1901. She has a capable speed of 18 knots per hour.

At the time that J. Pierpont Morgan organized the International Mercantile Marine the Haverford came into the trust.

COMPANY PAYS WRECK VICTIMS

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, June 14.—Nineteen suits for damages against the Rhode Island Company arising out of the East Providence accident on June 5 have been settled by the company in amounts ranging from $15 to $300.

Testimony that the motorman of the wrecked car increased the speed going down the hill where it tipped over and ground eleven people to death came out at the wreck inquest yesterday. One witness heard the motorman say: "For God's sake, don't blame me for this accident." Additional witnesses are being examined to-day.

SAVED AFTER FALL INTO NIAGARA FROM AIRSHIP

ROY KNABENSHUE IS REPORTED BADLY HURT IN FLIGHT OVER THE FALLS.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 14.—Roy Knabenshue, aeronaut, lost control of his airship at 11:30 o'clock this morning and dropped into the Niagara River. He and his ship have just been rescued by the life-saving crew. It is reported Knabenshue is hurt.

INDICT LOWELL MEN; CHARGE LIQUOR PLOT

TWO EX-POLICE COMMISSIONERS AND TWO SALOON MEN ARRAIGNED.

As a result of secret indictments returned by the Middlesex county Grand Jury, two former members of the Lowell Board of Police removed by Mayor James B. Casey and two wholesale liquor dealers were arraigned at East Cambridge today on six counts charging conspiracy. Warrants are out for two more liquor dealers who have not yet been arrested.

These arraigned today through counsel were Frank B. Dow and Laforest H. Beals, removed by Mayor Casey from the Board of Police because of alleged malfeasance in office and neglect of duty, and Richard C. Hemman and John Joyce, wholesale liquor dealers. Joyce is one of the big wholesalers of Lawrence.

Written pleas of not guilty were presented by counsel to Judge Sherman. All four men were held in $2,000 for trial. Elisher H. Pearson, the third member of the Lowell board removed by Mayor Casey, was not indicted.

The two other men indicted are also liquor dealers.

The indictment against each of the six is on six counts of conspiracy in connection with the sale of liquor and the purchase of supplies by licensed innholders of Lowell.

Conspiracy to Aid Brewery?

In the first count, it is charged that Dow and Beals, as members of the Lowell Board of Police, conspired together to so conduct themselves as to improperly benefit the Harvard Brewing Company, doing business in Lowell.

The second count charges that they conspired together that licenses should be corruptly granted to such persons as should purchase liquor from the Harvard Brewing Company.

The third count alleges that they conspired to corruptly vote to grant licenses to persons designated by the Harvard Brewing Company or its agents.

In the fourth count it is charged that the conspiracy was that Dow and Beals should be paid a consideration to so conduct themselves as to improperly benefit the Harvard Brewing Company.

Payment of Money Charged.

The fifth count charges that consideration should be paid Dow and Beals or granting licenses to such persons as purchased their liquors from the Harvard Brewing Company.

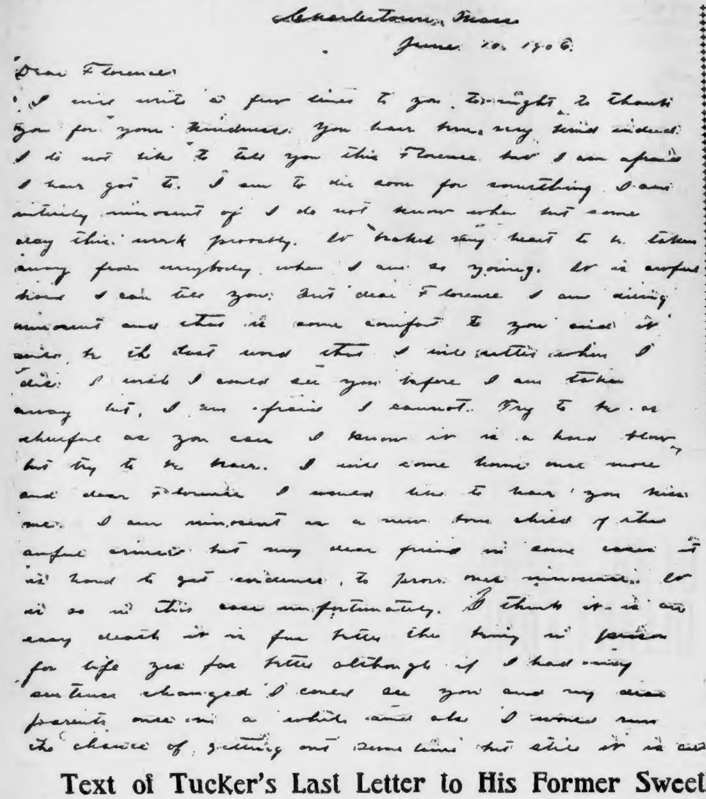
The sixth count charges conspiracy in the allegation that Dow and Beals were paid consideration to cause licenses to be granted to such persons as were designated by the Harvard Brewing Company.

GIRLS TO LEARN HOW TO MAKE STRAW HATS

Annual exercises of the Boston Trade School for Girls are in progress to-day at 674 Massachusetts avenue. Arrangements have been completed for the Summer term, which will include an entirely new department, that of straw hat making, which it is believed will be very successful. Dr. Edward Everett Hale makes an address to the pupils to-day.

THE MOST REMARKABLE LOVE LETTER EVER WRITTEN

PHOTOGRAPHIC REPRODUCTION OF CHARLES LOUIS TUCKER'S FAREWELL LETTER TO HIS SWEETHEART, FLORENCE ANDREWS



Charlestown, Mass
June 10. 1906.

Dear Florence
I will write a few lines to you to-night to thank you for your kindness. You have been very kind indeed.
I do not like to tell you this Florence but I am afraid
I have got to. I am to die soon for something I am entirely innocent of I do not know when but some day this week probably. It breaks my heart to be taken away from everybody when I am so young. It is awful hard I can tell you; But dear Florence I am dying innocent and that is some comfort to you and it will be the last word that I will utter when I die. I wish I could see you before I am taken away but, I am afraid I cannot. Try to be as cheerful as you can I know it is a hard blow but try to be brave. I will come home once more and dear Florence I would like to have you kiss me. I am innocent as a new born child of this awful crime but my dear friend in some cases it is hard to get evidence, to prove one innocence. It is so in this case unfortunately. I think it is an easy death it is far better than being in prison for life yes far better although if I had my sentence changed I could see you and my dear parents once in a while and also I would run the chance of getting out some time but still it is an awful life just the same. and I am sure I could not stand it. I have got a dear mother & Father

Florence and it is hard to be taken away from them.
I heard you were quite sick I am very sorry. There is trouble every where isn't there. Well dear friend we all have to be taken away sometime but Florence
I did not ever think I would be taken away from this world this way when I have done nothing wrong.
My mother will give you something to remember me by dear Florence and she will give you my picture
too. a small one.
I remember you dear friend and I have always liked you. I am sorry I did not see you when I was at the East, Cambridge Jail. You could have seen me there and as a matter of fact my mother was going to bring you but you know you went away and now dear Florence it is to late to see me as I am. I cannot write anymore dear friend it hurts me to pen these lines more than I can tell you. I beg of you to excuse writing. I am not in the right mood to write good. I will close now.

Yours lovingly.
Charlie.

Text of Tucker's Last Letter to His Former Sweetheart.

Dear Florence:

I will write a few lines to you to-night to thank you for your kindness. You have been very kind indeed. I do not like to tell you this, Florence, but I am afraid I have got to.

I am to die soon for something I am entirely innocent of. I do not know when, but some day this week probably. It breaks my heart to be taken away from everybody when I am so young. It is awful hard, I can tell you.

But, dear Florence, I am dying innocent, and that is some comfort to you, and it will be the last word that I will utter when I die.

CROWDS THRONG TO FUNERAL OF TUCKER

ness clear as the light. Give them grace to pray for such as do the wrong, and hear and bless them when they pray. Grant this through thy mercy, O our God, who are blessed and livest and reigneth forever and ever.

"Almighty God, whose property is ever to have mercy to spare, we praise thee for the deep repentance and strong faith of thy servant. We know in whom we believe and that by faith in a risen Lord his soul has passed from tribulation and trial to thy presence, where is joy forever.

"Vouchsafe him peace, refreshment, bliss, and in thy good time may all who love him best on earth dwell with him where truth, justice, love forever reign. Grant our prayer through Jesus Christ. Amen."

The service closed with a benediction.

PREACHER AT BIER, SAYS BOY INNOCENT

The following address was read by the Rev. Dr. William Copley Winslow at the funeral of Charles L. Tucker to-day.

Dear Friends:

Almighty God permits us to be tried and to suffer when we cannot understand the cause or the reason for our tribulation.

We suffer now; we behold this scene; we realize this event; but the "why and the wherefore" are clouded in mystery. We can only say, God's will be done—if it be His will.

Our acquaintance with men and knowledge of things may be decisive and clear in a brief space of time. An hour's close talk with Charles Louis Tucker, fully half of it in contact with his soul and inner self, convinced me that he spoke the truth when he solemnly declared to me, "I am perfectly innocent of this crime; I know nothing about it." His eye, tone, action were natural, yet earnest and decisive.

I told him that all true repentance rested upon confession of sin. He replied, "I know it; but how can I confess to something I never did?"

Sustained by Conscience.

Charles showed true and tender feeling for the wife he lost and loved so happily; for his mother, the deepest affection; for his father, love and respect; for his brother, love and best wishes in his new happiness.

He exhibited no trace of vindictiveness toward anyone, and he spoke very sympathizingly of the father and family of the woman who met the tragic death.

"What sustains you, Charles?" I asked. "Why are you so hopeful?"

"Simply because I did not commit that terrible act."

For many months I have intensely studied the case in every possible light. I have read all the evidence; I have seen many witnesses; I have consulted with able men, and I have inspected localities, all in order that I might arrive at the truth.

My interest in the case began through an interest in the aged man who suffered so terrible a loss on March 31, 1904. Perhaps I had a little prejudice against the accused. I followed the trial closely. After the verdict was rendered I approved of an editorial entitled, "A Surprising Verdict." Then began my personal investigations simply in the cause of truth and for justice.

Believed Him Guiltless.

I declare to every one that my careful, conscientious, decisive conviction is that Charles Tucker did not commit, could not have committed, the awful deed charged against him.

I account for the verdict of guilty upon three grounds, chiefly:

He was the victim of circumstances.

He was prosecuted with almost superhuman vigor and subtlety.

He was unfavorably regarded by some of the jurors and others.

But that past is over. Charles forgave every one who may have injured him. But let us drop the curtain upon the scene that is past.

We now look beyond and above. God's Holy Word teaches us that they who pass through great tribulation and are redeemed through Christ shall be blessed forevermore. By his forgiving spirit, by his courtesy, by his demeanor during the long months of his imprisonment, by his professions of innocence and belief in Christ to Mr. Bishop and to me, and finally by his conversion and baptism, this young man had earned a reward at the last. And believing, as I do, that he was innocent of the great crime, I am sure that he has inherited already a glorious peace and a triumphant happiness. The serenity of his features in death, the smile upon his calm face, betoken the rest of his spirit and his freedom from every care or sorrow.

He had accepted Christ, he had entered the fold, and with the eye of faith we may behold him already rejoicing, active, progressive in the ministeries of God's kingdom, where Jesus and the angels welcome him and all who believe and are saved.

There we leave his spirit to rejoice in God and delight to do his will forever.

Here we pray God to bless the broken-hearted and to direct them to the reunion for father, mother, sons and for the brothers, in the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

"INNOCENT," DYING WORD OF TUCKER

It was a subject of much comment today, as the public began to calmly consider the closing events in the Tucker tragedy, that Tucker's last words, read in front of the death chair, were written for him by another, and differed from the words which he said it was his intention to speak at that time.

"Many times during the last few days of his life the prisoner said, 'My last words will be I am innocent of the murder of Mabel Page.' When he came to his death he read from a paper words of forgiveness for his enemies, of hope for forgiveness for himself and a belief in the mercy of God. There was no word in the paper protesting his innocence, and hundreds of thousands who noted this fact at once asked themselves if it was significant.

"After baptism and preparation for death he could not say that he did not commit the murder," they said.

Last Words of Innocence.

Then it developed that the note had been in his possession for more than an hour before his execution, and that ten minutes before his death he had reiterated to Thomas F. Vahey, as they parted, his absolute innocence of the murder for which he died. So it appeared that these words to Mr. Vahey, actually his last words—because the paper which he read had already been prepared—was a declaration of guiltlessness.

Then came the remarkable discovery that the note which he read was not in his handwriting, and the later admission by Attorney James H. Vahey that he wrote the note and that his brother Thomas added a sentence to it later.

This cast an entirely different light on the subject, and emphasised the unfortunate circumstance that Tucker should have prejudiced himself in the minds of some people by his failure to declare his innocence before the chair, as he had said he should.

It is regarded as unprecedented that a man convicted of murder, about to die, should make a statement in which he had been rehearsed. It indicates that he, to the last, placed his faith in the advice of his counsel, and obeyed their suggestion as to what he should say, even to the extent of omitting his denial of guilt.

Attorney James H. Vahey was much disturbed when he learned the color that had been given Tucker's failure to declare his innocence in the face of death. "If I had had the slightest idea of that," he says, "I should have written it in the statement, but I told him that he had already so often said he was innocent that it was not necessary to do so again."

In sharp contrast to his speech before the chair, which was not his speech at all, but his lawyers', are his last leters, written on Sunday, when he expected to die that night, to his parents, his brother, his sweetheart and his lawyer. Each of these is fairly punctuated with his declarations that the law is putting to death an innocent man.

The letters and the statement Tucker made to Thomas F. Vahey ten minutes before the death chamber may be regarded as his dying words. Each one of them said: "I am innocent."

THE FUNERAL HYMN.

The following hymn, No. 180 in the Episcopal Hymnal, was sung at the funeral:

Who are these in bright array,
This innumerable throng,
Round the altar, night and day,
Tuning their triumphant song?
"Worthy is the Lamb, once slain,
Blessing, honor, glory, power,
Wisdom, riches to obtain,
New dominion every hour."

These through fiery trials trod;
These from great afflictions came;
Now before the throne of God,
Sealed with His eternal Name;
Clad in raiment pure and white,
Victor palms in every hand,
Through their great Redeemer's might
More than conquerors they stand.

Hunger, thirst, disease unknown,
On immortal fruits they feed;
Then the Lamb amidst the throne,
Shall to living fountains lead;
Joy and gladness banish sighs;
Perfect love dispels their fears;
And forever from their eyes
God shall wipe away their tears.

BATH HOUSE AT REVERE OPEN

With twelve people waiting in line to get in, the State Bath House at Revere to-day opened its doors for the Summer season.

Mrs. M. J. Doyle, of Revere, was the first woman to pass through the turnstiles, while on the men's side William F. Coombs, of Malden, was No. 1.

Many changes have been made in the bath house during the Winter. There is an entire new emergency room, several times larger than the one in use last year, in which first treatment will be given to all cases of drowning or sickness along the beach. Frank F. Droese, a trained nurse, is in charge of the room.

BOSTOCK FOR PARAGON PARK

There will be high animal festivals at Paragon Park this Summer for Manager Dodge has contracted with Bostock, the Animal King, for exhibitions and performances of a large group of wild animals of all varieties, accompanied by the most famous animal trainers of Europe, together with those whose thrilling experiences at Dreamland, Coney Island, have been reported.

There will be a larger display even than made by Mr. Bostock at the famous "Zoo" in the old Public Library.

A feature of this show will be gorilpanzee, part chimpanzee and part gorilla. It is a powerful anthropoid, standing six feet high and the keepers fear him more than they do a lion or a tiger.

Followers of Mrs. Eddy From All Over the World Tell Thrilling Experiences at Immense Simultaneous Praise Meetings In Churches and Halls.

"O'ER waiting harpstrings of the the mind,
There sweeps a strain,
Low, sad and sweet, whose measures bind
The pow'r of pain,
And make a whitewinged angel throng
Of thoughts illumined by faith and breathed in raptured song,
With love perfumed."

By Eleanor Ames.

AT precisely 7:30 o'clock last night, in eight different places within a radius of half a mile of the Mother Church, 50,000 Christian Scientists were exaltedly singing this uplifting hymn, the favorite of its composer, Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy.

It was the most marvelous religious demonstration ever held in America, and could all the meetings have been amalgamated under one roof it would have stood unparalled in the history of the world.

The meetings were all of praise, thanksgiving and testimony.

From every corner of the globe, earnest men and women poured forth their hearts in thanks for Christian Science, and with faces illumined and voices vibrant with joy recited the good their faith had brought to them.

"Thank God for Christian Science and for Mary Baker G. Eddy!" That was the text of each of the hundreds of testimonials and it found an echo in the hearts of all who heard.

The pulse of the gathering was strongest at the main meeting, held in the magnificent new Mother Church on Norway street, but the same spirit of earnestness rested on all the overflow gatherings.

5,500 in New Church.

However, if such a thing as envy enters into the composition of the true Christian Scientists, envious thoughts must be directed toward the 5,500 fortunate ones who secured seats in the wonderful Temple, whose completion and dedication has brought them here to worship beneath its dome.

In anticipation of the universal wish to find a seat in the temple, many of the Scientists went to the Church as early as 8 o'clock and at quarter before seven the doors were closed and later comers were directed to the overflow meetings.

When the word was given out that the capacity was exhausted, there was a swaying mass of people in front of the church, which filled the street for an entire block. And still they came, on foot, in private carriages, in hansom cabs, in motor cars, all happy and cheerful, all prosperous-looking to a degree that amazed the onlooker.

It was as if the cream of the population had been skimmed from all these various cities of the world and sent here as a proud sample representation.

Turned away, they neither argued nor complained, but went their way, smiling and hoping for room somewhere else.

Services Were Identical.

It was the same beautiful and, to the unknowing, incomprehensible spirit which let them stand in the boiling sun of Sunday without murmuring.

The services in the old and new portions of the Mother Church, in Jordan Hall, Horticultural Hall, Chickering, Potter, Howe and Woodson Halls were identical, so that wherever they worshipped the Scientists had the satisfaction of knowing that they were all in unity.

In the temple, from floor to topmost gallery, there was a solid, colorful massing of people, all beaming with happiness, all calm, all showing in their faces the earnestness which was in their hearts.

Quietly and without confusion the crowd was seated and reposefully they waited for the beginning of the services. The rustle and bustle and hum of conversation which so often marks a vast audience before a meeting is in official order, was entirely lacking.

At 7:15 the superb organ pealed forth in a rapturous prelude. Shortly after First Reader McCracken appeared on the platform.

Audience Burst Into Song.

He read the words of the opening hymn, read slowly and with expression. The audience arose as one and burst into song. Then came a reading of the Gospel and a correlative passage from Mrs. Eddy's "Science and Health," the bowing of heads in silent prayer, the repetition of the Lord's Prayer, another hymn, and the meeting was opened for testimony.

Two favors the leader asked, that the speakers would give the names of their home towns and not speak more than two [illegible]

How "Science" Cured Me of Fear.

By Mrs. C. W. Ellis,

Of Chicago.

I became a Christian Scientists because I sought a practical religion that could be lived every day. I did not go in because I had been healed of any claim of illness.

But I have been healed of subsequent claims since I entered Chirstian Science. My little girl Jennie is a Christian Science baby, and her birth was attended with much less trouble than is the case under medical practice.

Jennie is a Christian Scientist, too. She knows her scientific saemen of being in "Science and Health" and her Lord's prayer. When she is ill she repeats those.

In my own personal experience I think that my demonstration over a claim of fear has been the most remarkable. I was naturally a timid girl and afraid to be left alone at nigh. My husband is a travelling man, and is away for two weeks at a stretch sometimes. I used to be terribly afraid of being left alone. But I have conquered all that through Christian Science. Why, I stay alone nights now in our flat, and it is on the first floor and in Chicago at that.

Baby Born in Christian Science,

By Mrs. William P. Burns,

Of Baltimore, Md.

My baby was born in Christian Science. I had no doctor and I had not the slightest trouble, and baby is perfectly healthy.

My son Donald, now ten years old, is a Christian Science boy. He broke his arm and was cured by Christian Science in one week, so that he could go out and play ball.

The arm was broken at the elbow. An X-ray examination was made to establish the fact that the bones were really fractured. We decided to have it set by a doctor, though personally I would have been willing to have Christian Science heal the case altogether, without medical aid.

After the bone was set Donald went under Christian Science treatment, and, as I said, was out playing ball in a week.

Cured of Ills by Absent Treatment.

By Miss Fannie Buck,

Of Austin, Minn.

I did not let any doctor touch my hip, but subjected it to absent treatment, and the cure was speedy and permanent. It has never given me any trouble since. Furthermore, instead of being an almost incessant sufferer from the worst form of asthma, as I was for several years, I am to-day in the best of health in every regard. The change for the better became noticeable just as soon as I brought Christian Science to my aid.

How I Recovered From Consumption.

By Mrs. Lucinda Buck,

Of Austin, Minn.

I had about all the ailments flesh is heir to, among them heart weakness, nervous prostration and consumption. For three years I was confined to my bed with consumption, and every doctor from far and near who came to see me told me that I could not possibly recover. I was apparently in the last stages of the disease when I was prevailed upon by my friends to try the efficacy of Christian Science. I began a systematic reading of "Science and Health," and took the absent treatment, and straightway I began to improve in health so rapidly that all were astounded. To-day I consider myself completely cured of consumption and all the other ills to which I was subject.

Shall Not Need Crutches Much Longer

By Mrs. James McCulleuth,

Of Chatham, Canada.

I am seventy-two years old, and it was about three years ago that I became a Christian Scientist. Since then I have been steadily improving. While I was suffering the worst from rheumatism I fell and fractured my right hip. The doctor who attended me did not set the fracture properly, and my hip was in a terrible condition when I sought the benefit of Christian Science. To-day, but for occasional twinges of rheumatism, which are growing fewer and fewer, I do not suffer, and my hip is gaining strength so fast that I shall not need crutches much longer.

MOB STONES NON-UNIONISTS

An angry mob of strike sympathisers stoned a crowd of non-union men in Lynn last night and broke all the windows in their headquarters building. The police were needed to disperse the crowd.

At 11:15 when all was quiet men suddenly appeared from three streets and surrounded the house. Some of the crowd threw stones, breaking several windows. One strike breaker was hit in the back.

The sudden appearance of Officer Varnum caused a lull in the stone throwing. R. J. Jesscott, the head of the detectives who guard the house, pointed out to him a man who had thrown a stone.

Varnum took his name but did not arrest him. Then the officer ordered the crowd to disperse and all obeyed.

MASS BY ARCHBISHOP AT DELANY FUNERAL

GOVERNOR AND CHURCH NOTABLES AT OBSEQUIES FOR NEW HAMPSHIRE PRELATE.

Special to the Boston American.

MANCHESTER, N. H., June 14.—After lying in state all night on a catafalque in front of the high altar of St. Joseph's Cathedral, the body of Bishop John B. Delany was to-day buried in the vault reserved for prelates of the New Hampshire diocese.

Governor McLean and his staff attended the funeral services. Coadjutor Archbishop O'Connell of Boston sang the mass for the dead and Rev. Dr. Mullen of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, Boston, preached the funeral sermon.

In the course of his eloquent review of the life-work of Bishop Delaney, Dr Mullen said:

Manly Priest, Priestly Man.

"He was conspicuous before all for the well balanced order and poise of his judgment; not brilliant, it may be said, but ready and solid in his studies, and all his aims and purposes. He enjoyed a rare combination of rich and various qualities of mind and heart, strength and firmness with quiet docility, active zeal united with a calm discretion; feeling without passion, and a tender sympathy without softness; an evenness of temperament and ever-present cheerfulness that made him easily a favorite with all. He was the soul of candor and straightforwardness in all his doings; and at no time were the honesty and sincere unselfishness of his purposes ever doubted or suspected by those who knew him. He had what might well be called a sterling character—a manly priest and a priestly man.

"There was a side of his personality which was known best to his teachers and intimates, his deep religious character. Sham and pretense of all kinds he ever disliked and avoided; and his easy, familiar ways sometimes hid from the unthinking the depths of religious conviction and piety within him. Beyond his favored natural qualities, he was eminently supernatural in all his views and aims. His quiet, steady faith, and confidence in God and the divine life of the church seemed as natural to him as his breathing, and as vital."

Bishops and priests from all the eastern States assisted in the services. The big cathedral was crowded to the doors, and through the courtesy of the Street Commissioners the streets in the neighborhood were closed to traffic.

K. C. as Special Escort.

The procession which bore the bishop's body from the episcopal residence, where he died on Monday, to the Cathedral consisted of delegations from all the local Catholic societies. A platoon of fourth degree members of the Knights of Columbus acted as a special escort. Following them were members of the clergy, attired in their soutanes and wearing surplices. Each clergyman carried a lighted candle. As they walked they chanted the "Miserere."

Bishop Delany was born in Lowell in August, 1865. He was educated in the Lowell public schools and in Boston College, graduating from the latter institute in 1887. He then went to Paris, taking a four year course in theology in the Seminary of St. Sulpice. He was ordained May 23, 1891, after which he returned to this country and was assigned to the New Hampshire diocese. In 1898 he was appointed chancellor of the diocese, and in 1904 was consecrated bishop.

DOCTOR WHOM GIRL ACCUSES HELD IN $10,000

The case of Dr. Nicholas W. Cousens, charged with an attack on fifteen-year-old Margaret Murphy in his office, was to-day continued in the Waltham Police Court until Wednesday, June 20. Dr. Cousens was ordered held in $10,000 bonds for his appearance on that date, which sum he promptly furnished.

Miss Murphy is to-day confined to her home in a condition of severe nervous prostration. Waltham is deeply stirred over the affair, which has made the greatest sensation in the history of the city.

The doctor denies his guilt in the strongest of terms and his professional friends have rallied to his support with offers of assistance.

The alleged assault is said by Miss Murphy to have been committed Tuesday evening in Dr. Cousens' office in his residence on Crescent street. The girl says she went there to be treated for indigestion and that against her will indignities were forced upon her.

She has been a student in the Newton grammar and high schools and is reported to be of a modest, retiring disposition and a very bright scholar. She has large blue eyes, blonde hair, regular features and a well-developed figure.

Dr. Cousens has practiced in Waltham for twelve years. He has a clientele second to no other physician in the city. He belongs to the most exclusive society set and is a generous contributor to charitable institutions. Two years ago he was married and has an infant son.

COUNCILLOR SULLIVAN IN DEATH DANGER

In Critical Condition at Relief Hospital, After Relapse During Night.

Hon. Michael J. Sullivan of the Governor's Council, who collapsed in the Mayor's office last Monday, was placed on the dangerous list at the Relief Hospital to-day. He is suffering from cerebral hemorrhage. It was believed at the Mayor's office that he was stricken with heart failure. At the hospital it was at first thought that he would recover within two days. During the night he had a relapse, and it was found that his condition was serious.

An Ornament To The Kitchen

Here's an oil stove that burns ordinary kerosene oil. For appearance, safety and all-round cooking efficiency it is fully equal to a coal or wood range and far more economical. Moreover, think of the cool comfort, convenience and satisfaction that result from using a stove that will bake, broil, boil, roast or toast on the hottest days without heating up the kitchen.

THE Florence Automatic Oil Stove

is mechanically perfect; the oil level is self-regulating and the flame always under absolute control. There is no dirt, no smoke, no soot, no leaky valves, no wicks to trim. No other form of stove will do your cooking so cheaply, so quickly or so economically as the Florence Automatic—no other stove is so light and strong—so attractive in appearance.

Florence Automatic Oil Stoves are sold by dealers generally. If your dealer does not sell them send for our illustrated catalogue giving full description, or call at our store, Central Oil & Gas Stove Co., 17 Washington St., Boston, and see the daily demonstration of cooking on the Florence Automatic Oil Stove.

THE JUNGLE

By Upton Sinclair

SYNOPSIS.

THE story of "The Jungle," Upton Sinclair's novel, which has caused the government investigation into the methods employed by the Beef Trust, has its origin in an actual Packingtown romance.

In Ashland avenue—"back of the stock yards"—the wedding took place. The first chapter merely shows a broad-shouldered butcher being wedded to a young girl who sees in him a hero. The wedding in all its grotesqueness is described in this chapter. The wedding ceremony is typical of Packingtown. It ends at dawn, when Jurgis and his bride, Ona, depart, sadly realizing that the contributions, which are a feature of the feast, will not nearly bear the expense of the ceremony.

Practically penniless, Jurgis tells his bride she shall not return to work in the packing house—he will work early and late. He could not work harder, but the thought of seeing her contribute toward their support was abhorrent to him.

On arriving in Chicago, J. Savedilas, a Lithuanian, who ran a delicatessen store in Packingtown, guided Jurgis, Ona, Marija and the remainder of the party through the stock yards, after he had given them lodging. In this section of the story the author reveals some of the things that have startled the country.

He tells how a government inspector, typical of his kind, sits at the door of the freezing room and feels the glands of the cattle for tuberculosis—but if one conversed with the inspector and heard interesting things about cattle disease, the official would let a dozen bodies pass him without investigation. The method of preparation of meat is vividly portrayed in this instalment, and even the simple-minded children of nature from Lithuania revolt against the conditions described and witnessed daily in the contaminated precincts of Packingtown.

Marija, who "had nothing to take with her save her two brawny arms and the word 'job,'" had found work in one of the smaller plants labelling and painting cans. The little coterie were happy and had but one thing to bother them—the cost of living. Their board and lodging was costing too much. So they decided, against the advice of Savedilas, who said they would be swindled, to buy a small house, dividing the ownership among them.

CHAPTER VI.

Copyright, 1906, by Doubleday, Page & Co. All rights reserved.

JURGIS and Ona were very much in love; they had waited a long time—it was now well into the second year—and Jurgis judged everything by the criterion of its helping or hindering their union. All his thoughts were there; he accepted the family because it was part of Ona, and he was interested in the house because it was to be Ona's home. Even the tricks and cruelties he saw at Durham's had little meaning for him just then, save as they might happen to affect his future with Ona.

The marriage would have been at once if they had had their way; but this would mean that they would have to do without any wedding feast, and when they suggested this they came into conflict with the old people.

To Teta Elzbieta especially the very suggestion was an affliction. What! she would cry. To be married on the roadside like a parcel of beggars! No! No!—Elzbieta had some traditions behind her; she had been a person of importance in her girlhood—had lived on a big estate and had servants, and might have married well and been a lady, but for the fact that there had been nine daughters and no sons in the family.

Even so, however, she knew what was decent and clung to her traditions with desperation. They were not going to lose all caste, even if they had come to be unskilled laborers in Packingtown; and that Ona had even talked of omitting a veselija was enough to keep her stepmother lying awake all night.

It was in vain for them to say that they had so few friends; they were bound to have friends in time, and then the friends would talk about it.

They must not give up what was right for a little money—if they did, the money would never do them any good, they could depend upon that. And Elzbieta would call upon Dede Antanas to support her; there was a fear in the souls of these two, lest this journey to a new country might somehow undermine the old home virtues of their children.

The very first Sunday they had all been taken to mass; and poor as they were, Elzbieta had felt it advisable to invest a little of her resources in a representation of the babe of Bethlehem, made in plaster, and painted in brilliant colors.

Though it was only a foot high, there was a shrine with four snow-white steeples, and the Virgin standing with her child in her arms, and the kings and shepherds and wise men bowing down before him.

It had cost fifty cents; but Elzbieta had a feeling that money spent for such things was not to be counted too closely, it would come back in hidden ways. The piece was beautiful on the parlor mantel, and one could not have a home without some sort of ornament.

A SORE PROBLEM.

The cost of the wedding feast would, of course be returned to them; but the problem was to raise it even temporarily. They had been in the neighborhood so short a time that they could not get much credit, and there was no one except Szedvilas from whom they could borrow even a little.

Evening after evening Jurgis and Ona would sit and figure the expenses, calculating the term of their separation. They could not possibly manage it decently for less than two hundred dollars, and even though they were welcome to count in the whole of the earnings of Marija and Jonas, as a loan, they could not raise this sum in less than four or five months.

So Ona began thinking of seeking employment herself, saying that if she had even ordinarily good luck, she might be able to take two months off the time. They were just beginning to adjust themselves to this necessity, when out of the clear sky there fell a thunderbolt upon them—a calamity that scattered all their hopes to the four winds.

About a block away from them there lived another Lithuanian family, consisting of an elderly widow and one grown son; their name was Majauszkis, and our friends struck up an acquaintance with them before long. One evening they came over for a visit, and naturally the first subject upon which the conversation turned was the neighborhood and its history; and then Grandmother Majauszkiene, as the old lady was called, proceeded to recite to them a string of horrors that fairly froze their blood.

She was a wrinkled-up and wizened personage—she must have been eighty—and as she mumbled the grim story through her toothless gums, she seemed a very old witch to them. Grandmother Majauszkiene had lived in the midst of misfortune so long that it had come to be her element, and she talked about starvation, sickness and death as other people might about weddings and holidays.

The thing came gradually. In the first place as to the house they had bought, it was not new to all, as they had supposed; it was about fifteen years old, and there was nothing new upon it but the paint, which was so bad that it needed to be put on every year or two.

The house was one of a whole row that was built by a company which existed to make money by swindling poor people. The family had paid fifteen hundred dollars for it, and it had not cost the builders five hundred when it was new. Grandmother Majauszkiene knew that because her son belonged to a political organization with a contractor who put up exactly such houses.

They used the very flimsiest and cheapest material; they built the houses a dozen at a time, and they cared about nothing at all except the outside shine. The family could take her word as to the trouble they would have, for she had been through it all—she and her son had bought their house in exactly the same way.

They had fooled the company, however, for her son was a skilled man, who made as high as a hundred dollars a month, and as he had had sense enough not to marry they had been able to pay for the house.

HOPED TO FORECLOSE.

Grandmother Majauszkiene saw that her friends were puzzled at this remark; they did not quite see how paying for the house was "fooling the company." Evidently they were very inexperienced. Cheap as the houses were, they were sold with the idea that the people who bought them would not be able to pay for them.

When they failed—if it were only for a single month—they would lose the house and all that they had paid on it, and then did they often get a chance to do that? Dieve! (Grandmother Majauszkiene raised her hands).

They did it—how often no one could say, but certainly more than half of the time. They might ask any one who knew anything at all about Packingtown as to that; she had been living here ever since this house was built, and she could tell them all about it. And had it ever been sold before? Susimilkie! Why since it had been built no less than four families that their informant could name had tried to buy it and failed. She would tell them a little about it.

The first family had been Germans. The families had all been of different nationalities—there had been a representative of several races that had displaced each other in the stock yards. Grandmother Majauszkiene had come to America with her son at a time when, so far as she knew, there was only one other Lithuanian family in the district; the workers had all been Germans then—skilled cattle butchers that the packers had brought from abroad to start the business.

Afterward, as cheaper labor had come, these Germans had moved away. The next were the Irish—there had been six or eight years when Packingtown had been a regular Irish city.

There were a few colonies of them still here, enough to run all the unions and the police force and get all the graft; but the most of those who were working in the packing houses had gone away at the next drop in wages—after the big strike.

The Bohemians had come then, and after them the Poles. People said that old man Durham himself was responsible for these immigrations; he had sworn that he would fix the people of Packingtown so that they would never again call a strike on him, and so he had sent his agents into every city and village in Europe to spread the tale of the chances of work and high wages at the stock yards. The people had come in hordes; and old Durham had squeezed them tighter and tighter, speeding them up and grinding them to pieces and sending for new ones.

DROVE POLES TO WALL.

The Poles, who had come by tens of thousands, had been driven to the wall by the Lithuanians, and now the Lithuanians were giving way to the Slovaks. Who there was poorer and more miserable than the Slovaks, Grandmother Majauszkiene had no idea, but the packers would find them, never fear.

It was easy to bring them, for wages were really much higher, and it was only when it was too late that the poor people found out that everything else was higher too. They were like rats in a trap, that was the truth; and more of them were piling in every day.

By and by they would have their revenge, though, for the thing was getting beyond human endurance, and the people would rise and murder the packers. Grandmother Majauszkiene was a socialist, or some such strange thing; another son of hers was working in the mines of Siberia, and the old lady herself had made speeches in her time—which made her seem all the more terrible to her present auditors.

They called her back to the story of the house. The German family had been a good sort. To be sure, there had been a great many of them, which was a common failing in Packingtown; but they had worked hard, and the father had been a steady man, and they had a good deal more than half paid for the house. But he had been killed in an elevator accident in Durham's.

Then there had come the Irish, and there had been lots of them, too. The husband drank and beat the children—the neighbors could hear them shrieking any night. They were behind with their rent all the time.

But the company was good to them. There was some politics back of that, Grandmother Majauszkiene could not say just what, but the Laffertys had belonged to the "War Whoop League," which was a sort of political club of all the thugs and rowdies in the district; and if you belonged to that you could never be arrested for anything.

Once upon a time old Lafferty had been caught with a gang that had stolen cows from several of the poor people of the neighborhood and butchered them in an old shanty of the yards and sold them.

He had been in jail only three days for it, and had come out laughing and had not even lost his place in the packing house. He had gone all to ruin with the drink, however, and lost his power; one of his sons, who was a good man, had kept him and the family up for a year or two, but then he had got sick with consumption.

That was another thing, Grandmother Majauszkiene interrupted herself—this house was unlucky. Every family that lived in it, some one was sure to get consumption.

BRONCHIAL DISEASE CURED

ASTHMA Do you suffer from an oppressed feeling, choking or smothering sensation and difficult breathing?

BRONCHITIS Hacking Cough, pain in the chest; loss of flesh!

CONSUMPTION Have you been warned of its approach by a persistent cough, Night Sweats or Hemorrhages?

FRIENDLY ADVICE

That Induced Mrs. E. M. Doten to Come from Burlington, Vt., to be Cured by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians of a Deep-Seated Chronic Disease.

Mrs. E. M. Doten, a well-known and highly respected resident of Burlington, Vt., was advised by her friends to have the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treat her for an obstinate and deep-seated malady from which she had suffered for years. She told her experience to the writer as follows: "I suffered greatly from rheumatism and indigestion that was complicated with heart symptoms. The local physicians were unable to reach my trouble. My friends, who knew how capable and trustworthy the Osmo-Chemic Physicians were from personal experience, advised me to have them treat me. With that object in view I applied at their office in Boston and was greatly pleased with the courteous and skilful manner that they made a thorough examination of my case. I found the treatment just what I needed for my trouble, and so am glad to make this statement in the hope that others suffering as I did may profit by my experience."—(Signed) MRS. E. M. DOTEN.

Symptoms of Bronchial Disease

This condition often results from Catarrhal and other inflammations extending from the head and throat.

"Have you a cough?"
"Are you losing flesh?"
"Do you cough at night?"
"Have you a pain in side?"
"Do you take cold easily?"
"Is your appetite variable?"
"Have you stitches in side?"
"Do you cough until you gag?"
"Do you raise frothy material?"
"Do you cough on going to bed?"
"Do you cough in the morning?"
"Are you low spirited at times?"
"Do you spit up yellow matter?"
"Is your cough short and hacking?"
"Do you spit up little cheesy lumps?"
"Have you a disgust for fatty foods?"
"Is there a tickling behind the palate?"
"Do you feel you are growing weaker?"
"Is there a burning pain in the throat?"
"Have you a pain behind the breastbone?"
"Do you cough worse night and morning?"

WELL AND STRONG

Mr. Tilton Owes His Gratifying Condition to the Superb Skill and Unvarying Success of the Osmo-Chemic Physicians.

Mr. J. H. Tilton is well and favorably known in the neighborhood in which he resides, No. 48 Dix st., Dorchester. Being fearful of the dread scourge, consumption, when pains attacked his lungs, he at once sought the valuable assistance of the skilful Osmo-Chemic experts, and says of his experience: "I read so much of the skill of the Osmo-Chemic Physicians that I submitted my case to them for expert treatment. They found, after a careful examination, that my lungs were affected and that my stomach was diseased as well. I am so pleased with the result that I do not hesitate to recommend the Osmo-Chemic treatment as the best for the intelligent and skilful treatment of lung and stomach diseases."—(Signed) J. H. TILTON.

THE NEW DISCOVERY

That Cures Kidney Disease Successful in Mrs. Olson's Case.

Mrs. Louisa Olson, who resides at No. 776 Allegheny st., Roxbury, was successfully treated by the Osmo-Chemic experts for general decline of the vital force due to kidney disease. She says: "I had a pain in my back and was intensely nervous. The Osmo-Chemic treatment reached my diseased kidneys and banished the pain and nervousness. I am greatly pleased to recommend the new discovery of the Osmo-Chemic Physicians for the cure of Kidney disease." (Signed) MRS. LOUISA OLSON.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO READ

"A good beer is as nutritious as fruit. Fermented liquors, taken in moderation, increase the secretion of the digestive juices and promote the solution of food. A good beer partakes in all the advantages of the alcoholic beverages and at the same time, usefully quenches the thirst by its more abundant amount of water."

Song of Toil

By R. B. L.

WHEN you are weary
With toiling and strife;
When you are harassed
And trouble is rife,

There is a comfort
Both wholesome and good,
Safe for your temper
And safe for your blood.

It cannot hurt you
Because it is pure;
And it will give you
The strength to endure.

Good as a beverage
All through the year;
Nothing surpasses
A glass of Pfaff's Beer.

EUROPEAN TOUR ELECTION

MOVE UP AND GAIN ON HIGH LEADERS

Teachers down in the lists are moving up to challenge the leaders in the European Tour Election.

In the voting yesterday a dozen candidates went upward, while very few of the leaders made notable gains.

In the Greater Boston Division, Miss Violet Creber of Dorchester, who has advanced steadily for several days, went forward another point toward the "Grand Tour" section, passing Miss Elizabeth G. Hutchison.

Miss Katherine Y. Prescott took the leadership of the "Shakespearian Tour" section from Miss Madeline Driscoll, and Miss Kate Roud recovered the position she lost the day before to Miss Mary A. Haverty.

In Massachusetts, Miss Leonora Teasdale of Clinton moved to first place in the "Shakespearian Division," passing Miss Nellie E. Carroll of East Bridgewater.

Miss Margaret F. G. Lee of Worcester leaped into the winning list above Miss Nellie G. Connors, forcing Miss Edith Farrington of Lowell outside the number standing as tour-winners.

Miss Nellie B. Bulger of Portland, Me., left the foot of the published list of candidates in the division of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, passing Miss Mary G. Connolly of Portland by a gain of 11,000 votes.

Notice For the "Finish."

There are now BUT TWELVE MORE DAYS in which to cast votes before the polls close.

The last coupon will be printed in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN of June 24. No votes will be received at the BOSTON AMERICAN office after 10 o'clock p. m. Monday, June 25. Votes sent by mail must bear the postmark of June 25 to be counted.

A twenty-vote coupon will be printed in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN next Sunday, June 17, and candidates and supporters should put in their prepaid subscriptions not later than Friday evening to insure delivery and gain the advantage of the double coupon.

Voters and candidates are warned against putting in any subscriptions at the polls, not bona fide readers of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. The five days following the closing of the polls will be taken confirming and verifying subscriptions to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, and any attempt to take advantage of the closing hours to file improper orders may be met with disqualification of the candidate or publication of all the facts.

Every name on a subscription to the SUNDAY AMERICAN must be that of a reader to receive the paper. In cases where it is necessary to make delivery newsdealers will be changed without notice.

CANDIDATES AND THEIR STANDING

Following is the list of teachers having 50,000 or more votes in the European Tour Election.

The list is arranged to show which teachers would be winners of the forty tours if the contest were ended to-day.

The winners of the $1,000 will be the six teachers having the highest individual totals at the end, regardless of the division in which they are located.

The winners of the $500 in cash "consolation awards" will be the ten teachers polling the highest totals and failing to win tours:

NEW COW DISEASE BAFFLES DOCTORS

GUILFORD, Vt., June 14.—A disease that baffles the State cattle commission and its corps of veterinarians has appeared in this section and many cows have died. The animals are taken with a violent fever and die within thirty-six to forty hours. Young cattle are most frequently affected. Not a single cow attacked has recovered, and it is believed the cows have been poisoned.

THE GREAT AUTO CHASE

CHAPTER LXI.

The First Capture

"Well, we certainly did drag this thing off accordin' to Hoyle, I don't think," remarked Mr. Hammond. "Talk about your pickles. Gee, it makes me woozy."

"If you are trying to say that you have made a hopeless muddle of it all I quite agree with you," blazed Davis. "If you hadn't played the fool and let Culberson work off that empty case on you we should have been miles away by now instead of hiding in this dirty place, afraid to show our noses."

"Aw, you gimme a pain," said Hammond. "Who was it sent a telegram to Fiske? I guess you'd like to say you didn't do that, wouldn't you?"

"How did I know the diamond wasn't in the case?"

"Same here. How did I know it? Now don't get fresh any more. I done the best I could, and I don't want no lip about it. Maybe you think I'm powerful cheerful about it."

"Well, there's no need of us quarrelling," said Davis, more calmly. "Where is Culberson now? How are we going to get hold of him?"

"You've got that fool cipher thing and it seems to me as how one of us'll have to run the risk and keep it."

"Well?"

"I'll do it, I'll do it," Mr. Hammond declared. "It's my own fault for not shaking the glim out of Culberson's skin in the first place. Gimme a reasonable time, and if I ain't back you may know I'm pinched me for the cooler."

Half an hour later Mr. Hammond, sans some perkiness, and with the quality of caution protruding from every pore, wandered out and away. He found Kate Pierce waiting for him.

"Very pleased to meet you again, Miss," he said, gallantly. "May I ask where Mr. Culberson is just now?"

"He could not come, but asked me to come and tell you," she replied.

"What happened to him?"

"There is a warrant out for his arrest and the police are after him here, so he went to Somerville. Here is the card of instructions he gave me," she concluded.

The card was passed over and Mr. Hammond screwed his eyes up to stare at it, after which he put it in his pocket.

"Another one of them mixed up things," he informed her. "Lord, I never see so much mystery in me life as he can drag off."

Miss Pierce was looking at Mr. Hammond with an expression which he had never before seen on her face.

"Why don't you put an end to all this trouble by restoring the diamond?" she asked at last.

Mr. Hammond looked up in astonishment.

"I'm sure if it were returned there would be no further steps taken," she went on.

"Returned?" Mr. Hammond repeated. "That's me. It's what I've been trying to hammer into Culberson's head."

"But you have the diamond now. Mr. Culberson told me you took it from him."

"Well, ma'am," said Mr. Hammond, "I'd hate to call him a liar, but he is. He played seven-up with me, and when I thought I had the glim in the first I didn't have it at all. It was only the empty case I pinched from him. I only wish I did have the diamond. I'd return it."

"Then Culberson has it?"

"Betcherneck—excuse me," said Mr. Hammond. "I ain't seen a whisker of it."

Miss Pierce turned away as if that were all, and Mr. Hammond made a sweeping bow.

"I'm obliged to you, ma'am, for your trouble. I hope your health stays good."

Miss Pierce went one way and Mr. Hammond another. He had hardly gone a hundred yards, however, when he was suddenly pounced upon by two men and borne to the ground. There, despite a desperate struggle, handcuffs were put on him and he lay still, glaring up at his captors.

"And I guess this is funny—nit," he remarked. "What is it?"

"Game's up, Hammond," said Fiske. "You are my prisoner. I arrest you for complicity in the theft of 'The Green Blaze.'"

LABOR PROBES VT. CANDIDATES

Special to the Boston American.

MONTPELIER, Vt., June 14.—The fifth annual convention of the Vermont State Branch, American Federation of Labor, to be held in this city August 14, for which the call has just been issued, will be an unusually busy one, owing to the legislation which it is proposed to bring before the State Legislature at the session this fall. Every political candidate has been questioned with reference to his stand on labor questions, and at the convention these matters will be fully discussed.

WOMAN DIES FROM OIL STOVE EXPLOSION

In her struggle to get an exploded oil stove out of the house yesterday, Mrs. Ellen Barry of No. 466 Saratoga street, East Boston, had her clothing ignited, and was so badly burned about the body that she died at the Relief Station last night.

Mrs. Barry, who was the wife of John Barry, tried to smother the flames with mats, but, being unsuccessful, caught it up in her hands and started to carry it while ablaze down the back stairs. John Powers, a neighbor, who tried to help her, was badly burned.

24-OUNCE BABY IN INCUBATOR AT WONDERLAND

Tiny Girl Sent from Cambridge in Hope That She Will Survive.

IS DOING WELL SO FAR

A new baby, weighing only one and one-half pounds, has just arrived at the Infant Incubator show at Wonderland.

This mite of humanity is a girl who was born two and one-half months ahead of the natural time. It is now three days old and is being watched with unusual care by the incubator doctors and nurses on account of its extreme delicacy.

It is unusual for a baby to survive when it weighs less than two pounds at birth, and this little girl weighed half a pound less than that. With the special treatment possible only in an incubator hospital her life may be saved.

Hope to Save Her Life.

She is the child of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tesler of No. 396 Columbia street, Cambridge. She is a twin, the other one dying soon after birth. As a last resort it was decided to send the living child to the Wonderland incubator hospital.

Manager Christopher C. Egan of the incubators said to-day that he has strong hopes of saving this little one. Her first day's progress has been encouraging and she has even taken a little nourishment. This is in the form of mother's milk, administered by means of a catheter, fifteen grammes fluid weight at a time.

Practically Motionless.

The new baby is a source of great interest to all visitors at the incubators. She lies in one of the carefully constructed incubator machines, wrapped in a downy blanket, with a pink ribbon attached.

She is very quiet, practically motionless. On either side of her are incubaor babies who are able to move about a bit and wave their tiny hands.

But the Tesler baby just keeps still. It seems to take about all its energy to draw the very breath of life.

MILLION ALIENS AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, June 14.—Immigration Commissioner Watchorn said to-day that the immigration through this port alone for the year ending June 30, would reach 1,000,000 persons. This will be a record for the port of New York.

The year closing June 30, 1905, saw 1,026,499 immigrants enter all the ports of the nation, but year promises for the port of New York alone to equal the total last year for the whole United States. The immigrants are from every country in Europe, the Austro-Hungarians predominating. Next come the Italians, then the Russians.

BRIBERY FARCE PUBLIC INSULT SAYS RAYMOND

"Why Don't You Summon the "Big Bribers," He Asks in Open Letter.

PLOT TO DEFEAT JUSTICE

George J. Raymond, from New York, has sent the following letter to "the committee said to be investigating bribery at the State House":

Gentlemen—From what I see accredited to you by the newspapers, and from your individual remarks, one would think that I must be a fugitive from grafters. Almost every day for two weeks before I left Boston I read in the papers that I was to be summoned before you, I assume, to furnish you more names of grafters to whom you might grant absolution, but I heard nothing of any summons until I went away.

I do not deem it necessary, however, to make any excuses to you for being absent, because I never had, nor could I be induced to have, any confidence whatever in your so-called investigation.

I have had my experience with committees of themselves, appointed by themselves to investigate themselves, and as in all other bribery investigations of politicians with a pull, backed by the powerful corporations that put them in office, appoint their own speaker, president and chairman of committees, all of whom must represent their interests first, and the public second, the report has been the same, and the public led to believe that there was no cause for investigation.

Game Goes On as Usual.

Such investigations are always doctored and worn until public attention is diverted in other ways, then the great game goes on as usual, until some one "squeals" or gets caught; then another howl of investigation, but no briber ever goes to jail. No matter how courageous your report may be, the public will receive nothing more than an inkling of the real bribery and blackmail that has been growing worse and worse each year as the demands and the quality and quantity of politicians become more grasping. No mistake about this, gentlemen, I know it, and think you know it. You certainly have had greater opportunities to learn it than I.

Why don't you make a real investigation? Summon the big grafters to open rooms and let the light in. The crumbs of graft picked up by the $6 per week lobbyists and the $50 a vote State House association are nothing compared wi the real graft.

I have never claimed that all of you are grafters, but the unexpected statement made by one of your witnesses the other day that 25 in each 100 would sell their vote for money and 15 in each 100 for a dinner, would seem to me a very conservative estimate. But way the supposedly honest members always work so hard to shield the others and treat with such contempt all witnesses against them is something I have never been able to understand.

"All Doing Same Thing."

At one "investigation" I well remember the would-be briber said to the committee in secret—"Get me out of this or I squeal! I'll show up the whole bunch." One member of the committee had threatened to make a minority report of "Guilty"; the others said to him: "If you do, we will summon F— a friend of his— up here." Then they compromised; whitewashed, as they supposed, the whole investigation; but the guilty party in explanation stated, upon the floor of the Senate, that it was a "common occurrence," and they had "all been doing the same thing." I have much more respect to-day for that young man than I have for the committee that tried to shield him because they feared he would "squeal."

I have hoped in this investigation that there were men on your committee who did not fear the "squealers" who have been caught, otherwise we expect you to be successful in any effort to tie the hands of our District Attorney, but if the "squealers" "squeal," not only the State House but City Hall and many buildings on State and Devonshire streets will suddenly lose some of their most prominent occupants.

Insult to the Public.

You may, or may not, pardon me for the suggestion, that up to the present moment I regard your actions as an insult to the public, and nothing less than a conspiracy to defeat the administration of justice.

I earnestly hope that the result of your work and expense to the Commonwealth will be such that I may have occasion to at least partially change my mind as regards your committee.

But as to the manner of "investigation," I shall never change from the fact that the only "real" investigation that we will ever have is when the men who pay the bills and send you as their representatives to the State House shall do the investigating, with the right to have counsel on either side. How can any honest man object to this?

GEORGE RAYMOND.

New York, June 12.

1ST CONVICTION ADULTERATED MEAT SELLING

For selling hamburger steak containing a compound of sulphur and without setting forth on the package in which it was wrapped exactly what foreign substances the meat contained, John E. Janes, of Janes Brothers, provision dealers on Moody street, Waltham, was fined $25 on Tuesday by Judge Luce for a violation of the Purue Food Law. This is the first conviction on the charge of selling adulterated meat since the Beef Trust exposures begun.

Although it was a private hearing, the facts were learned to-day by the BOSTON AMERICAN. In self-defence, however, he told the judge that the hamburger steak was not of his own preparation. It had been doctored, he said, by Armour & Co. of Chicago.

Armour & Co., he explained, delivered the meat not in cans, but in boxes. The steaks were done up in packages of varying weights. On the boxes themselves there were marks to indicate that the contents had been dosed with an antiseptic. But there were no such marks on the packages, and nobody bought the boxes.

State Food Inspector Daniel H. McCarthy bought a pound of the steak from Janes on May 23 last. It looked all right, but its aroma was suspicious. McCarthy had it analyzed by an expert.

Janes was not arrested. He was just summoned to the Waltham District Court, and in deference to his wishes the case was tried and disposed of in secret.

RUNAWAY GIRL GLAD TO RETURN HOME

Jennie Saunders, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Saunders of East Walpole, who left home because her mother scolded her severely, is back home, glad to be under the parental roof again. She was found by her father at the home of a girl friend named Schultz at No. 22A Cleveland avenue, Everett. She readily consented to return home.

Price to Drop to $1.10 on July 1 and to $1 Per Thousand Feet on January 1.

FIGHT LED BY AMERICAN

East Boston is to have dollar gas. The Massachusetts Boar dof Gas and Electric Light Commissioners has issued an order to that effect in its decision given out today on the petition of thousands of East Boston citizens, which was presented by the BOSTON AMERICAN more than a year ago.

Acording to the order of the board—couched in the form of a "recommendation," as is customary—the price of gas will be decreased from $1.20 to $1.10 a thousand feet on the first day of next month, and six months later will drop to $1.

The circumstances of the East Boston petition will be well remembered by BOSTON AMERICAN readers. A petition had been filed by the BOSTON AMERICAN and another by Mayor Collins for cheaper gas in that part of Boston which had dollar gas. East Boston had been omitted, and the BOSTON AMERICAN took up, single-handed, a fight for a reduction in that part of the city.

Professor Bemis Testified.

The most eminent gas expert in the country, Professor E. S. Bemis of Cleveland, O., who had been engaged by the BOSTON AMERICAN to come to Boston to investigate conditions, testified as to the improperly high price, and other evidence was submitted. The commission took the matter under advisement and has now rendered its decision.

Since the matter has been pending, East Boston petitioners have endeavored to secure the passage of an act in the Legislature that should lower the price to a proper figure, with the lack of sucess that has characterized a l remedial measures brought before the present public lighting committee.

The following is the gas commissison's decision:

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
In Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners.

Boston, June 13, 1906.

EAST BOSTON PETITION.

This was a petition of more than twenty consumers of the East Boston Gas Company, asking for a reduction in price.

Public hearings were given, at which both parties were represented by counsel. The biard has supplemented the suggestions offered at he hearings by a careful examination of the company's affairs.

This company supplies but a small section of the city, entirely separate from the districts of the other companies. The present ownership and management date from April, 1903. Prior to that time it was independent in every way of the other companies in the metropolitan district.

Steady Increase in Sales.

The returns for the last fiscal year and the account of ten months of the current year show a steady increase in sales. Under the present ownership there has been some increase in the cost of management which has, however, been more than offset and perhaps justified by a substantial reduction in the manufactured cost. This reduction is apparently due in part to improved facilities for the purchase of supplies and the marketing of residuals.

The dividends have been advanced from six to ten per cent. The company makes all its gas in its own works, and there appears to be no question as to the efficiency of its organization or the skill with which its affairs are conducted. Unless some way not now apparent be found to still further reduce the company's costs or some change be made in its general policy, but little reduction can be made in price with the present output.

The control and ownership of this company is practically identical with that of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company and the New England Gas & Coke Company. The Consolidated company buys gas from the Gas & Coke company at less than its own cost of manufacture and sells it to at least one other company at a price much less than it costs the East Boston company to make its gas. These relations, therefore, place it in the power of the East Boston company, if its owners so desire, to purchase its gas at a much lower price than it can make it in its own works.

Possible Cost Basis of Price.

It is probably true that the Gas & Coke Company is unable with its present facilities to supply East Boston and at the same time give the Consolidated Company all the gas it desires, but if the amount needed for East Boston should be sent there instead of to the Consolidated, it would be a distinct advantage to the customers of the former company and an inappreciable loss to those of the latter. The owners of these properties may prefer to continue the existing arrangements rather than to sell gas to the East Boston Company, and they have an undoubted legal right so to do. The public interest, however, should not be prejudiced by such a choice.

The price at which the company might provide itself with gas, by purchase or otherwise, must be the basis for determining the price at which it ought to sell. It may not be for this board to prescribe just how the company shall adjust its affairs to enable it to make such selling price. It may well be left to reach this result in its own way. If it prefers not to buy it may find some other way of reducing the cost of its gas or it may reduce its dividend charge.

The present dividend will be recognized as a liberal, perhaps high return. A company is fairly entitled to a liberal return and a high dividend rate only when, by the judicious employment of every facility within its reach, it succeeds in supplying its customers at a low price. The public interest may be more secure with high efficiency in the management and a high dividend than with a low dividend and low efficiency. A dividend which may be entirely fair when every available facility is utilized for suplying the public at a low price, may become unreasonably high when, in combination with a failure to use those facilities, it makes that price impossible. The recommendation as to price is made upon these considerations.

Give Company Time.

The petition requested an order for improvement in quality, but for more than a year the candle-power has been above that required by statute and no specific complaint about the service was offered at the hearings.

It is the usual practice of the board to put into immediate effect a price based on existing conditions, but two important facts make the present case exceptional. If the company is to buy its gas, some time must be allowed for laying the new mains necessary to connect the works; again, the elimination of the railway grade crossings in East Boston now going on will change the grades in a number of the streets and make necessary the reconstruction of the gas mains now in them, temporarily making an abnormal increase in the company's operating cost. On this account the board has named one price for the earlier and another for a later date.

The board recommends:

That on and after the first day of July next, the net price charged for gas by the East Boston Gas Company shall not exceed one dollar and ten cents ($1.10) per thousand cubic feet; and that on and after the first day of January, next, the net price charged for gas by said company shal not exced one dolar ($1.00) per thousand cubic feet.

For the Board.

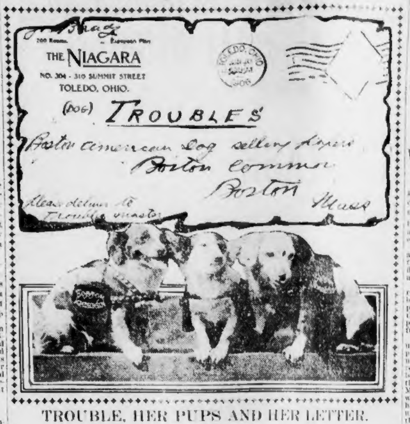
TROUBLE, BOSTON AMERICAN NEWSDOG, GETS A LETTER



TROUBLE, HER PUPS AND HER LETTER.

Comes All the Way from Ohio—Is Delivered Safely by Postman to Famous Spani l on Common.

"Trouble," the pretty Spanish spaniel who sells the BOSTON AMERICAN every day near the Park street entrance to the subway, got a letter the other day from an admirer in Toledo, Ohio.

The envelope from the Niagara Hotel, Toledo, Ohio, was addressed:

TO DOG TROUBLE.
Selling BOSTON AMERICANS on the Boston Common, Boston, Mass.

Probably the first dog which ever received a letter through Uncle Sam's mail, "Trouble" is so well known through her work for the BOSTON AMERICAN, that the missive came from far away Toledo Bostonward without delay, and in a few hours after being received here "Trouble" had read it, if she is able to read, for she can do almost everything else.

Her admirer asked about her health and how her son and daughter, "Muggins" and "Juno," who are learning to sell the BOSTON AMERICAN, were getting along in their lessons. The letter has not, as yet, been answered, for "Trouble" has been more than busy of late selling the paper and at the same time teaching her children, who are not so steady and capable as she is, owing to their youth.

But "Trouble," despite her name, is not discouraged with her family. She detects the newspaper instinct in them and promises the circulation department of the AMERICAN that before many months there will be three such dog news agents as were never before employed in boosting the circulation of a newspaper.

The worst task "Trouble" has, at present, is teaching "Muggins" to distinguish blue from green and in getting "Juno" to return promptly for other papers when she has just sold out to a particularly well-dressed woman.

"Juno," who has been selling papers for two months longer than "Muggins," feels that she is far more worldly wise than her brother. She has begun to study the fashions, and when she sees a well-dressed woman she forgets that she is a newspaper dog and begins to dream of entering society.

But when "Trouble" gets her children broken in she feels that she will have done great things for a dog, and it is possible that she may apply for a vacation of a few days, the first she has had in more than two years.

U. S. MUST PAY BACK DUTIES OF $5,000,000

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The mandate of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Philippine tariff case has been issued, and the government will now have to refund duties to the amount of $5,000,000.

The case arose from the fact that the military government in the Philippines collected duties on goods imported into the islands from July 12, 1898, to March 8, 1902. It was the intention of Congress, although not properly carried into the language of the law, to ratify the acts of the military government.

The importers carried the case to the United States Supreme Court and a decision in their favor was handed down May 28. Secretary Taft then made a final effort to save this money to the government. He induced Senator Spooner to introduce a bill ratifying the collection of those duties, which was referred to the Senate Judiciary Committee June 6.

It was hoped that the mandate of the court would not be issued until the customary thirty days after the rendering of the decision, and that the bill might in the meantime be passed. Pressure was brought to bear upon the chief justice by counsel for the claimants, and the mandate was issued last Saturday. The Spooner bill was consequently abandoned.

BOY IS FOUND STARVING IN VACANT HOUSE

Without food for three days, fifteen-year-old Daniel Patterson was found in an exhausted condition early to-day in a vacant house on Newman street by Patrolman John Tucker. The boy was arraigned in the South Boston District Court on a charge of vagrancy, and his case continued until Saturday. An effort will be made to find a home for him.

The boy had eaten nothing since Monday morning, and had to be supported out of the house when he was found. He crawled into the building last night and fell asleep on the floor.

Deserted by his father, his only living parent, three years ago, the lad was left to his own resources. For over two years he worked for Mrs. Trower, a newsdealer at Dorset and Boston streets. Several weeks ago she let him go, and since that time he has been living on what scraps he could find at various houses and sleeping in barns and outbuildings.

COLE FORCES COMPROMISE BRIBE REPORT

Recommends Expulsion of One Member and Reprimands for Few Others.

WHIPS MINORITY INTO LINE

A compromise report on the bribery game in the Legislature is to be the outcome. The lash has been applied to the minority of the committee, who would say positive things about the corrupt methods and practices at the State House, by Speaker Cole's clique.

The Speaker wants a unanimous report, and, to prevent a minority paper dissenting from his views, he has used the utmost influence of his position to bring several members of the Rules Committee into line.

Two or three members want to have the report say some people should be punished by the courts, or at least are deserving of punishment. The Speaker does not want the report to be so drastic as that. He prefers to drop the matter with as little fuss as possible.

And so a compromise has been agreed upon. The report will recommend the expulsion of one member, will condemn the members who have indulged in talk that reflects on the general honesty of the membership of the House, will attempt to break the force of honest testimony given by Mock and Leonard relative to bribery, and will severely criticise the newspapers who have had the temerity to say things of an unpleasant nature against the House and the Rules Committee, the Speaker's cabinet.

The climax of the report will be found in the statement that the great majority of the House is above suspicion and strictly honest. The report is expected to-day.

MR HEARST IS ENDORSED BY N. E. PRINTERS

His Action in Having 8-Hour Bill Reported Praised at Convention.

SPRINGFIELD, June 14.—The convention of the New England Allied Printing Trades Council is ended.

The principle of the eight-hour day was reaffirmed, and resolutions were passed endorsing the movement among wage-earners to have the wrongs of the working people righted by independent political action and the organization of non-partisan political clubs; advocating the principle of local option in taxation; praising Congressman W. R. Hearst in having the eight-hour bill reported in the House of Representatives from an adverse committee; favoring the admission of any able-bodied immigrant, and urging the passage of the anti-injunction bill now before Congress.

Resolutions were adopted recommending that plank 10 of the A. F. of L. should be changed to read as follows:

"The abolition of the monopoly system of land holding by taxation of all land according to its value; condemning high rents and low wages as the causes of consumption, and asserting that wages can be made high and rent low by taxing all land at its full value.

The next meeting will be held in Providence in June, 1907. President Moffitt of Fall River was re-elected.

AT 74 SHE WEDS FOR FIFTH TIME

YORK, Pa., June 14.—For the fifth time in her life, Mrs. Ida Elizabeth Clifford, a seventy-four-year-old widow, of this city, became a bride. She was married to Thomas M. Hoban, fifty-four years old.

Mrs. Clifford was first married when she was twelve years old. All her husbands died shortly after marriage.

GIRL CHARGED WITH THEFTS DEFAULTS

NORTHAMPTON, June 14.—Gilmore M. Wilson, the young woman from Dorchester who was arrested in March charged with stealing from the rooms of Smith College students and was liberated in $300 cash bail, failed to appear in court yesterday and was defaulted.

STATE RULE HANGS ON POLICE BOARD DECISION

CONSPIRACY CHARGES AGAINST CHIEF MATTHEWS, PROVIDENCE, TO BE SETTLED TODAY.

PROVIDENCE, June 14.—With a decision to make that may mean the overthrowing of the political powers that now rule the State of Rhode Island, the Board of Police Commissioners went into session at 10:30 o'clock to-day to finally thresh out the conspiracy charges made by Rev. A. B. Cristy against Chief of Police Frank Matthews.

The commissioners realize that, whatever their decision, it will bring down on them the condemnation of perhaps half the people of the city, so evenly is public opinion divided.

Indications of a strenuous session before the vote which was to decide the fate of Chief Matthews should be finally passed, were in the air. The failure to reach a common ground of reasoning last Tuesday, when it had been confidently asserted a decision would be reached, and the array of disputed questions that came up to demand settlement before the board could even begin to consider the evidence, foretold that the pathway to a decision would not be strewn with roses. Mooted points so far precluded the consideration of the testimony that it became apparent the board could not even get started without the aid of City Solicitor Baker to smooth the way.

Many Difficult Questions.

These are some of the questions that confronted the board when they assembled for another wrestle with the problem this morning:

"Shall the case be decided strictly on the testimony, or shall other matters within the knowledge of the board be allowed to weigh in the balance?"

"Is the question simply on the sustaining or non-sustaining of the charges against the chief, or shall the decision also prescribe the penalty, if guilty?"

"Shall the testimony given by John R. Nash in purging himself of contempt, and explaining why he was frightened away from the city, be taken into account in reaching a decision?"

There are also other questions that confronted the Commissioners, but no one gave utterance to them. They were questions that had to do with personal interests—the interests of powerful friends of the Chief and also of Mr. Cristy—the interests which are to make themselves felt a thousand times magnified after this case is closed.

Since the hearing was ended two weeks ago and the final arguments made by Mr. Cristy for himself and by Judge Lyman for the chief, the board has not met to consider the evidence until to-day, barring the unsuccessful attempt to do so on Tuesday. Copies of the testimony, covering some hundreds of typewritten pages, have been in their hands, and as individuals they have scanned them and weighed what appeared to each to be the salient points.

Each one of them has been put in the trying position of endeavoring to dissociate his own connection with the case from his position as one who is to pass judgment. All three Commissioners have been involved in the testimony, Chairman Luther more than Mr. Pierce, and Mr. Pierce more than Colonel Gross. Harrassed by these thoughts, and the realization that their action would be open to suspicion on account of this personal interest, and actuated by a desire to do justice to both sides, they have also run the danger of falling over backwards in an attempt to save themselves from stumbling.

Rests With Colonel Gross.

It has been tacitly understood all along that the final decision would very probably rest with Colonel Gross. This has been the talk on the street, among politicians and in the clubs which number the commissioners among their membership.

The persons who have voiced this opinion have presupposed that Chairman Luther and Lewis J. Pierce would hold opposite views, and that the third member of the Commission would determine the final edict. Colonel Gross is chairman of the Republican State Central Committee. The Republican organization may rise or fall with Chief Matthews this year, according as the sentiment for or against him is strongest.

"I could reach a decision in five minutes," remarked Chairman Luther, when asked how long he thought it would take the board to arrive at its verdict. This was on Tuesday, before the meeting at which the perplexing questions arose which had to be settled to-day before the board could get down to business.

This indicated that Mr. Luther had practically made up his mind, and that whatever controversy over the evidence or points of law came up this morning would be settled principally for the benefit of Mr. Pierce and Colonel Gross.

SEES BOSTON MONOPOLY IN NAVY SHOES

As a result of charges by Representative Lafean of Pennsylvania in the House of Representatives that a Boston shoe concern has a monopoly in supplying the navy, a congressional investigation has been demanded by the House and will be held regarding the contract awarded on June 5 to Joseph Herman & Co. of Boston, for 30,000 pairs of shoes for the navy, according to dispatches to-day to the BOSTON AMERICAN.

Against the charges of Representative Lafean, in which he says that a Philadelphia firm bid $8,150 less on the contract, comes the statement to the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day from Joseph Herman of Joseph Herman & Co., of No. 159 Lincoln street, as follows:

"There is nothing to be questioned about the award of the contract to our firm. We know nothing about it. We sent the samples to New York and the bid to Washington, as the government requires. The government, in their call for bids, stated that the award would be made to the lowest bidder whose sample, in the opinion of the Board of Inspection, meets the requirements of the specifications and is equal to the standard of the sample. A shoe cannot be made to meet the requirements for less than our bid. We have had several contracts with the government, and they know our responsibility."

The bid of Herman & Co. was $2.80 2-3 a pair. The firm of Gimble & Bros. of Philadelphia is said to have been the lowest bidder. Representative Lefean claims that the Philadelphia concern's bid was thrown out on minor technicalities on the ground that the shoes offered differed from the specifications in certain particulars.

Paymaster-General Harris, chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts of the Navy Department, denies that the Boston concern has a monopoly, and declares that the samples from the Pennsylvania bidders were inferior and not up to the specifications.

MOROS SLAY 2 AMERICANS FROM AMBUSH

MANILA, June 14.—News was received here to-day that Lieutenant Edward C. Bolton of the Seventeenth Infantry, acting governor of the district of Davao, Mindanao Island, and an American named Christian, manager of a plantation near Davao, have been killed by Moros. Chief Mungalayen and his two brothers are accused of the crime.

The murder was one of the most treacherous ever laid to natives in the islands. Lieutenant Bolton and Christian had been the guests of Chief Mungalayon the night previous to the assasination.

American planters in Mindanao fear that the Moros are about to begin a religious war and they are concentrating for self-defence. A witch preaching against Americans to the natives has aroused the Moros to a fighting frenzy.

A detachment of 100 regulars and 100 constabulary, led by Colonel W. S. Scott, assistant chief of the Philippine constabulary, has taken the field against a band of fanatics. The natives are heading for the mountains, destroying and pillaging villages on their march. Chief Mungalayon has 200 followers.

TO PAY $10,000 ON STADIUM DEBT

At a meeting of the Harvard athletic committee last night J. J. Rowe, '07, was approved as manager of the track team for next year. Ten thousand dollars was appropriated to be paid on the Stadium debt.

$5 DOWN, $1 PER WEEK

The lot of pianos must and will be sold at the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms to settle up unpaid accounts; nearly every standard make on hand; Ivers & Pond, Hallet & Davis, Chickering and Merrill, are in mahogany and walnut cases, 3 pedals and in first-class condition; two pianos for one; reasons why, expenses in Roxbury hardly noticed; expenses in Boston, $200 to $500 daily; nearly every make to select from; good uprights $40, $50, $60, $65 and $75; squares, $10, $15 and $20; why pay more? Several new pianos, the stock of a first-class piano maker gone out of business, which will be sold at a sacrifice; don't fail to call and secure one; greatest chance ever offered; the canvasser, agent and music teacher will tell you to keep away from us; reason why, we don't pay commissions; you get the benefit by our low prices; see for yourself, examine our nice stock.

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

Why pay $200 more for a piano because it is on a polished floor? See us, nearly every make in stock, at the lowest possible prices and on very easy terms; 10 years guarantee, stool and scarf with every piano; free delivery everywhere in unmarked wagons; goods guaranteed as represented or money refunded; entrance will be where you see the red flag; sale positive all this week; open Sat. eve. till 9 P. M. ROXBURY STORAGE SALESROOMS, 725 Shawmut av., Roxbury; any Washington st. car to cor. Williams st.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

COUNTRY CLUB RACES WILL BEGIN TO-DAY

This is the opening day of the Country Club races at Clyde Park. There are five events on the card, and every race has been well filled with the best quality of horse flesh in this part of the country.

The feature will be the Duke's Cup, and Hylas, a clever steeplechaser, owned by Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., is the favorite for the honors. Hylas will carry 156 pounds, and Nat Ray, who knows every inch of the Country Club course, will be astride.

Hylas has started only twice this season. On his first trial he beat Ben Crockett with ease at even weights, carrying 146 pounds. On his last appearance Hylas was one of the starters in the Empire State steeplechase at Gravesend, but fell. Since then he has been receiving special attention so as to fit him for the Brookline competitions.

Mr. Hitchcock, the ower of Hylas, thinks that his horse is ten or fifteen pounds better than last season, when he won the Country Club Annual with 142 pounds up. It is generally admitted that the horse that Hylas will have to beat will be Grandpas, which will be ridden by his owner, William C. Hayes.

In the Duke's Cup race The Lad may prove a dark horse. He is owned by Mr. Phizer, whose lightweight Dick Roberts last year unexpectedly won the race over the favorites Foxhunter and Dromedary.

There are other strong horses in this race, notably Gamecock, who at 151 pounds, ought to be able to give a good account of himself.

There are eleven probable starters for the Challenge Cup, and the favorite will probably be Pure Pepper, who will be ridden by his own, Harry S. Page. Last year Pure Pepper won the Myopia steeplechase, carying an impost of 156 pounds, and in the Challenge Cup race this afternoon will have to carry 153 pounds against Tellfon, whom he defeated last year, and Orthodox, whom Hitchcock expects to win with.

All three will carry the same weight, and they are the class of the entries.

The other three races have been well filled and the large crowd, which is expected to attend, will undoubtedly be treated to some rare sport. The first race will get under way at 3 o'clock. The probable starters are:

The entries for to-day's races follow:

FIRST RACE—Hack race; purse $250; one mile: Ferocious 150, Esher Leaf 150, Captain Hamm 150, Blue Print 150, Tellfare 150, Annie Russell 150, Lady Marcu 150, George Keene 150, F. W. Bonnie 150.

SECOND RACE—For three-year-olds and upward; purse $300; three-quarters of a mile: Bouncer 128, Oriflamme 127, Annie Russell 128, Marcotine 128, Adios 139, May Not 128, Star and Garter 141, Paprika 130, Pony 139, Cabalist 141, Long Days 128, Killarney II, 140, Bluette 113.

THIRD RACE—For four-year-olds and upward; for horses that have not won a race under Jockey Club rules within twelve months of date of entry; purse $500; one mile: Gallant 152, Mountebank 145, Killarney II. 137, Lipton 144, The Rival 144, Anticipation 142, Captain Hamm 144, Adios 142, Star and Garter 144.

FOURTH RACE—"The Duke's Cup" Steeple by the Country Club), value $250; about two and two and one-half miles: Ruffit 150, Kumshaw 143, The Lad 132, Grandpa 163, Judge O'Gin 143, White Crest 153, Saltine 136, Maxmillian 130, Caloosahatchie 146, Honorius 136, Marcella 111, 140, Headmaster 153, Game Cock 151, Hylas 156.

FIFTH RACE—The Challenge Cup (presented by the Country Club; value $250; about two and one-half miles: Ruffit 142, Dunbeath 140, Otho Vaugh 140, Notellus 150, Orthodox 153, Liffey Bank 142, Maxmillian 146, Tellfare 153, Pure Pepper 153, Valiant 147, Star and Garter 145.

RACE WITH HUB CREW IS OFF

WORCESTER, June 14.—"The Worcester High School eight-oared crew will not race the all-Boston schoolboys' eight-oared crew at the lake this year," was the statement made by Manager Fred Crerie last night. "Furthermore," added Crerie, "I have received no communication whatever from the Boston crew's manager, and at that we would not race, as we have been in training since December, and are tired of it. Since the race with Springfield High crew at the lake Saturday many of the boys have broken training, and it would take at least three weeks for us to get back into form for the race. Of course the boys are willing and even anxious to race the Boston crew, but we cannot now."

BIG GAMES AT REVERE ON MONDAY

Some sport will be witnessed at Oak Island Grove, Revere, next Monday, when the crack athletes around New England will compete in the open handicap games to be held by the Revere and Chelsea Aeries of Eagles. Handsome prizes will be given the winners, which are now on exhibition in a Washington street hotel, and for the big event of the day, the 10-mile run, a solid gold watch will be given to the winner.

The time for receiving entries has been extended until Saturday night, and should be sent to S. Mahoney, 107 Garfield avenue, Revere.

The pick of local athletes have already sent in their entries and Tom Cronin of South Boston, who won a prize at the Olympic games in Athens, will compete in the jumps. The events are open to all registered amateurs and the programme is as follows: 100-yard dash, 440-yard run, 880-yard run, one mile run, hop, step and jump, running broad jump, putting the 16-pound shot, an open team race, and a 10-mile handicap race. A hot ball game will also be played between the Pioneers of Revere and the J. O. E. club of Chelsea. Both teams are evenly matched and have been bitter rivals for years.

GOLFERS OFF ON TOURNEY AT BRAE BURN

Special to the Boston American.

WEST NEWTON, June 14.—Another fine day found the Brae-Burn links in excellent condition for the first round of the fourth annual amateur championship of the Massachusetts Golf Association. A large gallery was on hand to watch the play of A. G. Lockwood, Allston, the present champion, and Wyne E. Stiles, which started at 10:30. The latter was expected to give the champion the hardest run in the tournament for first place.

Stiles was a bit out of form yesterday on account of lack of practice. This morning he teed off with an excellent drive, and for the first holes played in good form leading his admirers to believe that the battle will extend to the last hole.

Other matches started as follows:

10:30—W. E. Stiles vs. A. G. Lockwood.
10:35—G. R. Angus vs. F. H. Hoyt.
10:40—J. G. Thorp vs. W. C. Chick.
10:45—J. F. O. Alsop vs. W. L. Crocker.
10:50—T. G. Stevenson vs. H. T. Bond.
10:55—Templeton Briggs vs. L. C. Fenno.
11:00—B. S. Evans vs. L. D. Pierce.
11:05—C. L. Becker vs. P. W. Whittemore.
11:10—G. H. Crocker vs. R. H. Daniels.
11:15—C. T. Croker vs. J. B. Hylan.
11:20—C. S. Cook, Jr., vs. Fay Ingalls.
11:25—H. B. Lewis vs. C. W. Noyes.
11:30—R. W. Brown vs. W. R. Millar.
11:35—J. G. Anderson vs. A. L. Ripley.
11:40—C. B. Cory vs. R. A. Leeson.
11:45—J. E. McLaughlin vs. L. J. Gilmer.

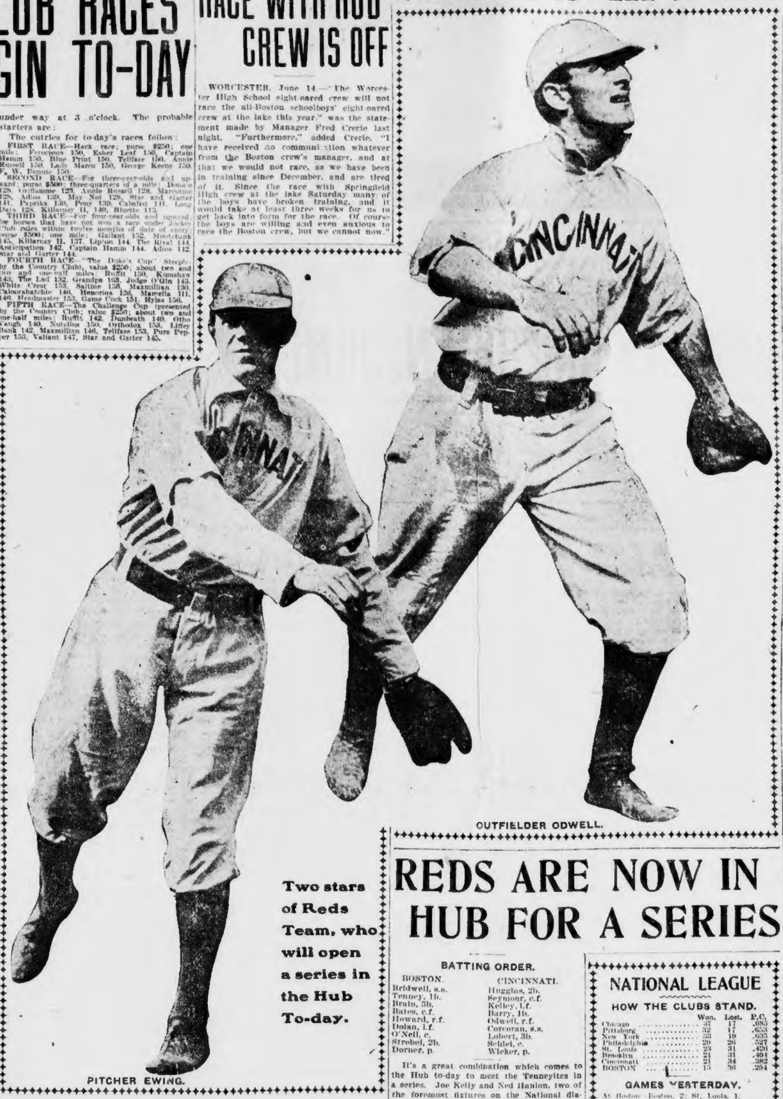
E. H. S. EASY FOR RINDGE TEAM

English High proved an easy proposition for the Rindge Manual Training nine at the Locust street grounds yesterday afternoon, the latter winning by a score of 9 to 1. Thompson for the victors pitched great ball, and was accorded good support. McLaughlin, who started the game for the losers, was relieved of his onerous slab duties in the fifth inning by Bidwell, who was a big improvement.

O'TOOLE RESIGNS JOB.

WORCESTER, June 14.—Robert F. O'Toole, who has been secretary of the Worcester Baseball Club since early in the Winter, and who worked through all the preliminary arrangements up to the formation of the corporation, resigned yesterday, and will henceforth devote his attention to other business.

EWING AND ODWELL OF REDS



OUTFIELDER ODWELL.

PITCHER EWING.

Two stars of Reds Team, who will open a series in the Hub To-day.

GOODMAN WILL MEET NEARY CHELSEA FIGHT TO-NIGHT

Those sizzling mitt artists, Kid Goodman and Charley Neary of Milwaukee, will go against each other at the Pythian rink to-night in a fifteen-round battle, which should develop into one of the hottest seen in the local ring for some time.

Such a fiery pair have not faced each other for some time and the slashing style which both use to win with will be on tap every instant and it will be surprising if the two can stand up under the terrific onslaught that will be handed out.

Goodman is likely to reign favorite, as he should, being a home product and having fought a draw with Neary of six rounds out in his own town, which was never known to give the visiting boy any the better of the argument.

Neary is favored by many, for his game battle with Jimmy Briggs, who is as tough as they make them, and the Beertown boy's exhibition won him a lot of respect. For that reason he will enter the ring with a good sized following.

As both are possessed of unlimited speed as well as carrying a dream wallop, it would not be surprising if something dropped before the full time expired. Either boy can stand a lot of punishment and still be dangerous, which leaves the result much in doubt.

Neary beat Briggs by body punching and this style is not to the Kid's liking. He will surely be badly placed if he allows Neary to wallop his hide the same way he did to Briggs. On the other hand, the Kid has a wonderful cross to the jaw which travels but inches, yet does the business, and there are few who can avoid getting it some time during a mill.

There are good preliminaries on the list, with Joe Geary matched with Beddo McGrath in a semi-final bout. Willie Riley meets Billy Connaty and they will go a fast pace for six rounds.

LONGWOOD TENNIS TO-DAY.

The Massachusetts lawn tennis championships begin to-day at Longwood, and there is a splendid field of sixty-four entries, including all the local cracks. The men entered form a hard lot to pick a probable winner from.

REDS ARE NOW IN HUB FOR A SERIES

BATTING ORDER.

BOSTON.	CINCINNATI.
Bridwell, s.s.	Huggins, 2b.
Tenney, 1b.	Seymour, c.f.
Brain, 3b.	Kelley, l.f.
Bates, c.f.	Barry, 1b.
Howard, r.f.	Odwell, r.f.
Dolan, l.f.	Corcoran, s.s.
O'Neil, c.	Lobert, 3b.
Strobel, 2b.	Schlei, c.
Dorner, p.	Wicker, p.

It's a great combination which comes to the Hub to-day to meet the Tenneyites in a series. Joe Kelly and Ned Hanlon, two of the foremost fixtures on the National diamond, leading the Reds of Cincinnati, touch the sod for the first time this season and there will be a great roundup of the fans to give the Cambridge player proper greeting and get a line on Hanlon's work since he gave up his berth with the Trolley Dodgers and switched to the Reds.

The diamond guests will come over from Gotham where they have been making it interesting for McGraw and his Giants and they will be fit company for the locals as they are one above them in the standing.

By tripping the Reds a few times the Walpole Street nine may be able to slip them the hook for last place.

It was good ball playing that won the third and concluding game with the Cardinals and Pfeffer won out from Eagan in a pitchers' duel. The home team played like pennant winners from start to finish and equalled Pfeffers star twirling by remarkable fielding tactics.

Several plays were reeled off that electrified the crowd and brought great praise for the individuals contributing them.

It was Pfeffers best performance of the year and his record was ten strikeouts and in three different innings he fanned two of the batters.

With the help of little Bates he got out of a bad place in the fourth, when the bases were filled and Marshall drove to left centre, Bates turning a complete somersault getting after the ball but clinging to it and saving three runs as two were down at the time.

A double by Shannon after Raub had singled in the next inning gave the Cardinals their only run.

Bates not only shone in the field, but at the bat he was "it," as he got the only two runs for his team, getting to base on singles each time.

Brilliant fielding by Howard, Smoot and Arndt were features.

Special to the Boston American.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 14.—It rained from dark to dawn last night, leaving the question whether a game would be played to-day or not open to discussion. McAleer said the game would be called if there was any possible chance of playing it.

Colonel Jimmie got into the fray himself yesterday, but was unlucky enough to bump into Glade at his best and to add to his troubles, strained his injured leg again by falling in an effort to stop O'Brien's bunt in the eighth inning. He pluckily continued in the game and if no bad result develops will play regularly in future.

Peterson and Young both asked to be sent in yesterday, but in view of developments, Collins probably made the best possible selection, as barring accident no legitimate baseball would have beaten Glade. It seemed strange to see Buck Freeman, once the terror of major league pitchers, sit on the bench while a youngster cavorted in right.

Selbach and Stahl made great catches yesterday in the second inning. Either one of the trio of slaps of Hemphill, Wallace and O'Brien would have been good for extra bases had they gone past the fielders. The two clouts Stahl pulled down were labelled home runs.

Collins intimated that there would be some new material on the team before long, but declined to mention names.

McAleer's tribe suffered a loss when Jack Powell, who is in rare form right now, received a strained back and will probably be out of the fray for a week or ten days.

Yesterday's game went to the Browns, 1 to 0, in ten innings.

Glade was in great form. For seven innings he held the visitors without a hit, and during this time only two of them got to first base, one on an error and the other on free transportation. Hayden broke the ice in the eighth with a single, but he was out stealing.

Dineen also had a good day in the box, holding the Browns well in hand up to the sixth inning. Up to this time Stone was the only Brownie who had found Dineen for a safety.

The Browns won out in their half of the tenth by pinch hitting. Hemphill led off with a mighty wallop to Ferris, which the latter handled in championship form. Wallace droped one of his difficult pops back of first that Grimshaw tried hard for, but could not quite reach, the ball bounding out of his mitt. O'Brien was unequal to the emergency, raising one to Stahl, but Niles's Texas Leaguerer in right field put Wallace on third, from which point of vantage he scored the only run of the bitterly contested game when O'Connor singled to centre.

BALL CLUBS ON COAST TO BE HELPED

NEW YORK, June 14.—Steps were taken in this city yesterday by baseball men to help the Pacific Coast League. This organization was thrown out of its stride by the San Francisco disaster and will have to drop its schedule unless assistance is rendered by the prosperous leagues of the East.

It was decided at a conference between Gary Herrmann, representing the National League; John E. Bruce, for the American League, and P. T. Powers, J. H. Farrell and T. J. Bryce, representing the National Association, to call upon all the leagues represented for specified contributions.

The National and American Leagues and the National Association will be asked for $500 each, all major league clubs for $150, and all Class A clubs $100 each, Class B clubs $50, Class C for $35 and Class D for $25.

All clubs will be asked to send their donations to the headquarters of the league.

BEALS WRIGHT WON'T LOSE A FINGER

LONDON, June 14.—Beals C. Wright, the American tennis player, to-day denied the reports that he is likely to lose a finger as the result of the injury to his hand which will keep him out of the contest for the Davis cup.

Mr. Wright expects to have fully recovered by next week, and he says there is no danger of amputation. He will not be able to play in the games for the cup, however, as they begin to-morrow.

Boston Blues, the star hitting club of the Hub, who offered to play Roslindale for the big laurels, have a provisional series arranged now with the strong Rockport team for the championship of the old Bay State, best two out of three, double-header on Independence Day, probably deciding battle some Saturday in July to be the goods.

In telling why he was obliged to pass up Bill Ferris's team, after waiting a week for the Roslindales to cover a forfeit placed in the hands of the BOSTON AMERICAN last week, Manager O'Connor of the Boston Blues chirped:

"Money talks. We put up the goods. Ferris failed. As Roslindale has a 16-year-old team who have now claimed the name of Roslindale, its up to them to play it out. Any fast club covering that money with the BOSTON AMERICAN can now get us for a series."

IF YOU WANT TO WIN IN LIFE'S RACE AVOID BORROWING; KEEP OUT OF DEBT

Beware the Worst of All Bad Habits

By Beatrice Fairfax

MOST of us have suffered from the "borrower."

She borrows our clothes, trinkets, perfumes, anything that we have and she has not.

Car fare is one of her pet forms of borrowing. She never has the right change and always murmurs something about paying the next time, but the next time never seems to come.

It is an abominable habit this of borrowing right and left from one's friends and quickly fastens on the borrower a very undesirable reputation.

If you do not own the desired article yourself and have not the money to buy it, go without it.

Remember that every time you wear a garment belonging to some one else you are helping to wear it out.

Five cents seems nothing to borrow, but if you keep at it all the time the amount you owe at the end of a year's time is quite amazing.

Housewives are perhaps the most inveterate of borrowers. It is so easy to run in next door and borrow a little tea, sugar, flour, a few clothespins or anything they want in a hurry and haven't got.

Needless to say, not one-quarter of the things borrowed are ever returned.

I dare say, if every housekeeper kept count of the money value of the things borrowed from her during the year she would be astonished and indignant at the result.

The woman who starts to make a cake and finds she has no eggs or sugar to finish it should attend to her supplies before she begins.

As to the borrowing of money, that is the worst borrowing of all.

To owe money is to place yourself under an ever-increasing obligation.

Occasionally a girl writes telling me that she has borrowed money from a man, or allowed him to pay for some article of clothing for her.

I tell you, girls, that when you do that you make the greatest possible mistake. No man but your father, your husband or some member of your family should ever pay for anything you wear.

When a woman asks a man to lend her money he cannot very well refuse, but you may be sure he thinks the less of her for doing so.

It is much better to do without a thing than to go in debt for it. Resist the temptation at the time and later you will be very glad you have done so.

It is so miserable to carry around a load of debt and obligation.

The wife who runs her husband into debt is a sad handicap to his career.

He will never get on if she hampers his every step by extravagance and debt. An extravagant wife is a curse to any man.

A young girl has no right to waste her father's money. It was hard for him to make it and she should respect his labor.

Always pay your share when going any place unless you are specially invited to be some person's guest.

If you get on a street car and a man you know joins you, pay your own fare. Just because he happens to be riding on the same car is no reason why you should expect him to pay your fare.

You cannot be too particular in all matters relating to money. Be independent; place yourselves under obligations to nobody.

She Says That Women Are Largely to Blame for Lack of Integrity Among Business Men To-day

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

THE women of America are astonished at and ashamed of the disclosures made in the high places of dishonesty and graft.

Mothers, wives, daughters and friends feel the disgrace which has fallen upon those they supposed to be souls of honor, and those who are in no [illegible] closely connected with the exposed "grafters" still feel the shadow which has fallen upon the body politic.

Yet to a large degree the women of America stand guilty of being an incentive to the crime known to-day as "graft."

The desire of women to shine socially, to wear beautiful garments and jewels, to entertain brilliantly and to do and have what other women of their acquaintance do and have, lies at the root of many a man's downfall.

Besides this fact woman's neglect to talk earnestly of absolute honesty and integrity in all dealings with the world to her men folks, whether sons, fathers, brothers or lovers, stands as a crime of omission at her door. She now to-day, as never before, she should realize how great her influence is, for good or ill, and begin to exert it.

At the root of every man's heart, however selfish he may be, there lies a weak spot.

He likes to believe that he is making some woman happy.

Careless Words

WHEN a man fails to do this, and knows that he has failed, no matter in what other lines he has achieved great things, he feels a certain sense of humiliation and defeat.

However, he may hide this fact from those who believe they understand him, however indifferent he may seem to the dissatisfaction of the woman he has failed to make happy; yet down under his exterior of indifference and perhaps selfishness lies a heart ache which he endeavored to hide even from himself.

He knows that to make some one woman (if not all who are under his roof) happy and contented is man's chief pride. And when he fails in this he knows he has missed his purpose.

It would be far better for the world if men talked this plainly and earnestly to the women of their household.

I have seen a man's face change from peace to pain at the thoughtless words of discontent uttered by a woman; and I have seen him cover the pain with anger and take his hat and [illegible] with [illegible] the remark which caused the woman to believe herself the injured party and left her utterly unconscious of the effect her words produced.

Far better would it have been for the man to say quietly: "The desire of my heart is to make you happy and to see you contented. Do not let me believe that I am failing. I am doing the best I can. Try and be happy with the home I provide and give me courage to [illegible]. There is no pleasure in work if it fails to give you happiness."

There are few women who would fail to realize their influence in the lives of mankind if they were talked to in this manner. Once realizing it there are fewer still who would misuse that influence.

Women's Influence

I WISH every mother and every young woman who hopes to become a wife and mother would read Luther Burbank's article on "[illegible] and Child Life" in the May Century.

That article should be printed in pamphlet form and sent by the government to every [illegible] America. It should be read from pulpits and discussed at women's [illegible] talked to young women in seminaries and colleges.

Mr. Burbank gives scientific proofs of many statements (made many times) in these columns of the power of mothers and teachers to develop in the children under their charge whatever qualities they desire them to possess.

This very subject of "graft" is mentioned by Mr. Burbank, and its prevention given.

Of course the influence exerted upon a child is more lasting and more easily bestowed than the same efforts given an adult, but there is no time in a man's life when he is beyond the influence of a loving and tactful woman with whom he associates.

The women who talk and act and live their respect for absolute integrity in a man and do not counteract it by envying the daughters and wives of the grafter are doing their part toward keeping the world honest and clean.

It is not the woman lecturer, not the woman writer, not the woman preacher who has the great power of moulding public thought. It is the large body of mothers, wives, daughters, sisters and sweethearts in every community.

Each one of them is wielding her influence with one or more men daily, and unconsciously helping to make men honest or dishonest.

Every word you say, every comment you make upon the conditions surrounding your own neighborhood has its effect.

Be careful—realize your responsibility.

ARE PROPOSALS OUT OF DATE?

NO two men propose alike, but so long as they do propose the girls don't mind how they do it—so some folks think, but they are not exactly correct. A girl is sometimes very particular as to how a lover proposes.

If she loves him, you may say, she won't mind a bit; but a proposal may be so put that a girl takes an instant aversion to the proposer. Many a man who fancied he had no more to do than to ask a girl to marry him has been astounded to receive a decided refusal, and I am quite sure it is the style of proposal which does the trick.

For instance, take the patronizing proposal—no girl will tolerate that for a moment. A man says practically, "Mary, I love you; indeed, I think I should like to marry you; you seem to suit me; how does it strike you for an honor?"

Of course, he puts it in a sentimental way, but his proposal simply amounts to this—that he seems to be granting the girl a favor by offering to marry her, and as any respectable girl is good enough for any man, why girls very naturally resent this style of proposal.

Then we have the man who proposes by letter—a singularly poor specimen this, and one who would never make a good husband. The man who proposes by letter, in fact, insults a girl; he as good as says he is afraid of her; that he is too cowardly to boldly ask her consent. Well, it's an insult if a coward presumes to woo a girl; it makes a fool of her.

She wants to be wooed and won by a man, not a craven-hearted ninny.

We do not need to discuss the man who goes in for heroics; he drops on one knee, seems to be in anguish; he raves and implores, and, in general, makes a perfect ass of himself.

Very few girls would accept such as he, and it is well, for a fool is bound to make a poor husband.

Why won't men, if they will propose, do it in a sensible way? Granted a proposal is a delicate matter, still it ought not to be a hard task for a man to do it correctly; and, seeing that most men who propose are most thoroughly intimate with the girls, one marvels wherein the difficulty lies; they need not be nervous with persons whom they know so well, surely.

Yet the fact does remain that although a man has courted a girl for even ten years, he will be as nervous as it is possible for man to be when he pops the question.

A plain, simple question has to be put, and the more plainly and simply it is put the better—the moment of proposal is no time for heroics; it is pre-eminently a time for common sense and seriousness, and the man who recognizes the latter fact is not likely to fail in getting the answer he desires.

But why should a proposal be necessary at all? If a man and woman have been courting for a prolonged period, what does it mean? Does it not indicate that they want to marry each other?

Surely it does, and if this is so, why should there be a formal proposal?

Few proposals are made in these times; a man does not really require to tell a girl he wants to marry her; it is the purest humbug if a man, after walking out with a girl, it may be for years, and courting her ardently all the time, actually asks for her hand in marriage.

The girl knows he wants to marry her; she would not continue keeping company with and being courted by him if she was not prepared to marry him. Therefore, why a formal proposal?

Of course, conventionality is a power in the land, and it may be that some girls will take nothing for granted; they must be "asked" by men.

The natural result following on courtship is marriage, and therefore if a couple go about courting for a long time there may be no necessity for a stupid proposal. However, if a girl seems a trifle backward, a few hints will usually make matters straight.

The man who is sure that he possesses a maid's love may never need to propose—they just drift into the engaged condition without an effort.

CHAPTER XLV.

Rumfit's Den

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

AS he spoke, Daddy Rumfit looked hard at Olga.

"It's no use denying it, my dear," he went on. "We know the stuff that George did his pals out of was hidden away. We know, too, roughly, where you used to live. And, further, we've got a very shrewd notion that it's in that there tower at this blessed minute. That's the spot, eh?" watching her face closely.

A crimson flush was flaming in Olga's cheeks. The bitter degradation of it all stung her sensitive pride.

She had known—though not until the time of his arrest—that her father for years had been living a life of dishonesty and fraud. She learnt now, to add the final drop to the cup of her humiliation, that not only had her father been a thief, but that he had not even been loyal to his associates in crime. Even them he had defrauded.

And she actually remembered the time when she had loved and respected her father!

The plunder of which this man spoke—she had first heard of its existence from the old gypsy woman, Hagar, who had told her that her father had hidden it safely away almost immediately before his flight and arrest.

It had been that stolen wealth that Hagar had urged her to use for herself on the night of her escape from the police, when she stole out at midnight from Philip Haggard's house to the gypsy woman's cottage.

Hagar had taken down a polished key hanging on the dresser, tempting her insinuatingly:

"You know what the key unlocks for you, if you have a mind. You needn't live poor any longer, and no one will be wronged! My dearie ain't going to throw it all away for a scruple? Take the key!"

Afraid of Nothing

And Olga had taken the key, but for a very different purpose from that in the less scrupulous Hagar's mind.

That hidden plunder was the proceeds of robbery. She might be a thief's daughter, but at least she was not a thief, and she recoiled with horror from the thought of touching one penny of that tainted hoard. All Hagar's tempting had been powerless to move her.

"I am George Desmond's daughter—a thief's daughter!" she broke out suddenly to the man, with a little bitter laugh. "How do you know I did not take it myself long ago, that stolen plunder?"

Rumfit started forward in his chair.

"Here, not quite so loud—and don't use them ugly words! It's a habit that might grow on one if it is not checked!" he protested, glancing round uneasily. "Not that any one's likely to overhear in this crib, only one can't be too careful. How do we know you never took it? Well, you see, you never was that sort—that's why. Well do I remember Gentleman George sayin' to me: 'I don't believe my gel Olga would ever speak to me again, though I am her father, if she knew what I am!'

"You allers was troubled with scruples beyond my power of understanding in George's darter. I'm a judge of character, and that makes me pretty easy in my mind that the stuff's still there."

"If you have known for four years that it has been hidden in the tower——"

"How is it we ain't been arter it before? A very natural question. Well, we have, only we couldn't spot the cache. Then, if you remember, a scientific guy took the house almost immediate, and he goes and fills the tower with things as we don't understand, and what might give one an unexpected nasty jar in the dark: electric wires and short circuits—the only circuits I know anything about suggests unpleasant recollections of absent friends!" he added jocularly.

"There was too much in that there tower to be played with. Besides, Gentleman George was fly. He'd got a safe hiding place for the stuff—one which we wasn't likely to stumble on without a clue."

Olga rose and stood looking steadily across the table at him with her dark eyes.

"If I were to give you that clue would you let me go? This place stifles me. The very thought of being dragged again into any association with that old hateful life that threw its shadow on me and its taint on my name fills me with horror. That which my father hid away—if I tell you where it is, you will let me go, will never seek to molest me again?" she cried passionately.

Rumfit and his wife exchanged glances. Then she said:

"Ain't we givin' ourselves airs a bit, my dear, when you're wanted for murder?"

She suddenly changed her tone, as she glanced at her husband's face and read his warning glance.

"Much better stay for a bit with us that's kind to you and don't bear you no ill-will for the way your father, the capting, did us——"

"Answer me!" cried Olga impatiently. "I won't trouble to defend myself to you against the charge brought against me—think me guilty if you will. But if I give you the information you seek, will you let me go and never molest me again?"

"We want a little more than information, my dear," said Rumfit. "There's a secret patent way of George's of getting into that tower; you've got to show us that—you'd have to pay a visit with some of us to that place, where your father was so long. Time enough to talk about the other thing—about saying good-by to yer—when we've pinched the stuff. What the mother and I says is: you've got your trouble with the police; why not come in with us? You'd be uncommonly useful, my dear——"

"You mean turn thief?"

"My dear, why use them ugly terms!" And Mr. Rumfit raised his fat and exceedingly dirty hands protestingly. "It's so foolish and unnecessary. What I mean is, if you're as fly as your father, with your face and style, why we could put you in the way of making a handsome living. Easy as kissing yer hand, too, to one with your brains. Now don't flare up and get huffy—chew the idea over a bit; 'taint as though you'd got a name to be disgraced," said Rumfit soothingly. "What do you think you're going to do with your picture posted up all over New York, an' no friends to go to, eh? Chew the idea over a bit, my gel, and you'll jump at it."

Olga made no answer. She realized desperately how completely she was in the power of these people.

CHAPTER XLVI.

The Honest Tradesman

IF she refused to join them, they might betray her to the police. Beneath Daddy Rumfit's smooth tones she caught glimpses of the underlying vindictive nature.

The whole appearance of the man was repellent and evil; enormously fat, with flabby cheeks and dull, fish-like eyes, he lay back in the greasy old armchair, as though the slightest exertion would be an effort to the unwieldy mass of flesh; but these eyes could light up with a malignant gleam, and a cat could not have moved more quickly and stealthily than Mr. Rumfit when he cared to rouse himself into activity.

Taking her silence for an inclination to "chew it over," the fat man nodded across to her approvingly.

"That's sensible, my gel," he said, with his dull fish-like stare at her. "You think it over. You'll come around to our way of looking at it. A handsome living waiting for you ain't to be sneezed at. Now I don't mind talking a bit freely to you. There's a big diamond that one or two of my pals has been admiring. You jine in the job and if it comes off all right, you shall stand in on the profits. A big diamond you may have heard of with a rubbishing name, 'The Mirror of the Moon'—who's that?"

The fat man had suddenly jumped up with surprising activity as the sound of a door being opened came to his ears. The dull somnolent look was gone from his face as he made a quick step forward, listening intently.

"It's only Jim," said Mrs. Rumfit, indifferently. "He's got the key. I sent him out in a hurry for the beer, it being so near closing time."

"Why did you give him the key, you fool?" cried her husband, turning quickly on her, with anger in his dull eyes. "Who's to tell who'll get round a kid like that? Don't know why we keep him, young varmint! Never made a bit for me yet! No aptitoode—no gratitoode either, for all the pains I've took with him. All wasted on him!"

OF USE IN THE HOUSE

IF eggs are cracked, add a little vinegar to the water, and they can be boiled as satisfactorily as undamaged ones.

Tough fowls can be made tender if put into plenty of cold water and cooked slowly for five or six hours.

To get rid of objectionable vermin in a room infested by them, go over the bedstead, springs and woodwork with a good coating of hard oil varnish.

Linoleum will wear longer if given a coat of varnish three times a year. Let the varnish be quite dry before walking on the floor. When cleaning linoleum use milk in a little paraffin.

Throw a little washing soda into the sink after every dish-washing to keep the sink sweet and clean and prevent clogging of pipes. Keep the soda in a closed can on the shelf by the sink.

WASHING WOOLENS

TO wash blankets so they will retain their first freshness use soft water, and plenty of it. Make a strong suds of soap and in it immerse the blankets, previously shaken free of dust and lint. Never rub the soap directly on the articles. Wash with the hands; never rub on a board. Rinse through several waters, having each hotter than the one which precedes it. This is the one great secret of the process. The heat expands the wool and keeps it soft. Shake out well, pulling the edges straight, and dry quickly. Wash all woolens the same way.

TAKE CARE OF THE WARDROBE

NEVER pin delicate materials on to the clothes line without placing a piece of clean paper between the fabric and the clothes pin, or a dirty line will appear on the material.

If any article has been scorched in ironing, lay it where the bright sunshine will fall directly upon it and the scorched part will be entirely removed.

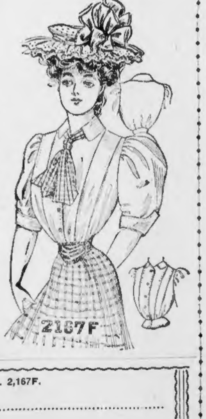
Tar may be removed from either hands or clothing by rubbing well with lard, then washing thoroughly with soap and water.

Apply a little spirit of turpentine to paint stains. Rub well and patiently, and when removed hang in the open air to free the article from the smell of the turpentine.

White paper should not be used for wrapping round articles that are to be put away, for the chloride of lime in it will destroy the color of the fabric. Yellow or blue paper is the best to use.

Hearst's Boston American Pattern

Ladies' Shirt Blouse



No. 2,167F.—Now that the warm Summer days are here to stay every one who can and has the inclination is indulging in out-of-door amusements as much as possible. One cannot have too many of the shirt blouses illustrated below, made in white linen, madras, Victoria or Persian lawn, or in colored Chambray or wash silk made without a lining.

They are most serviceable for tennis, golf, boating or any other country sport. The model illustrated is in white India linen, with collar and cuffs of light blue linen. For a woman of 36-inch bust measure it will require 3¼ yards of 27-inch, or 2½ yards of 42-inch material.

Cut in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure.

To obtain this pattern, postpaid, send 10 cents and the size, name and address to HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston, Mass.

No. 2,167F.

Smart New Material for Stunning Gowns

A NEW material, half veiling, half netting, but silkier than either, is marquisette, which in all the new shades of Gobelin green, dull stone, Alice and imperial blue, tan, beige, cafe-au-lait, lavender and gray, is in great favor for dressy gowns and suits.

Self-lined and worn over either white lingerie or white silk slip and corset cover, these are the coolest wool gowns imaginable. They are really good, though scarcely as novel, made with the ordinary silk lining.

Combination costumes are very smart—chiffon with satin finished broadcloth, veiling with taffeta. A gown of chiffon cloth is trimmed with stitched or shaped bands of the same shade of broadcloth, with an entire Eton or Empire jacket of the same. On the evening dresses taffeta is similarly used. Occasionally the same combination is used in contrasting tones, as a veiling of gray and dark blue check or hair lines takes trimming and jacket of blue.

New Radium Silks

For morning wear, church-going or informal calls, nothing takes the place of a thin, so-called Summer silk, unlined. For such gowns radium silks are more in favor than India and China silks and unwashable taffetas of last season.

Usually they are light in tone—pin checks or hair lines in grays, blues, tans or black and white, with an opalescent sheen that adds much to their beauty. A very little of the darker shade in a plain silk is used on these gowns to give them character; also a little hand embroidery in cream, ecru or white. On the whole, though, they are kept very simple.

Nets and Mulls

Nets and batistes or mulls elaborately embroidered in cut-work, satin stitch and open designs are made up in princess styles, or at least with the waist and skirt joined, the joining concealed by a sash. These form a welcome addition to a Summer trousseau, both for their beauty and suitability to many occasions, but especially because they do away with the eternal struggle to keep gowns from sagging apart at the waist line.

That word "chiffon" has attached itself to any and every sort of material this season, from the airy, diaphanous stuff which first bore its name down to such prosaic things as serges, and even to dignified broadcloths.

Face Wrinkles Removed, Youthfulness Is Restored

Frowns, crow's feet, deep lines around the eyes, nose and mouth always add years to one's personal appearance. By the Woodbury Method these lines, from whatever cause, are readily removed, and all other facial blemishes of featural defects quickly corrected.

WE REMOVE:—
Wrinkles, Scars, Powder Marks, Birth Marks, Pock Marks.

WE CORRECT:—
An Imperfect Nose, Outstanding Ears, Drooping Eyelids, Baggy Skin, Hollow Cheeks.

36 years of success make our methods perfect.

$1000.00 Prize Song, 10c

"Sweet Nellie Wood" is one of the successful songs in the great $1,000.00 prize contest held by the American Music Library. The success of the song in this contest immediately brought the piece to the attention of the popular actress, Marie Cahill. Miss Cahill was fortunate enough to secure first right to sing the song, which she promptly featured as her "leading" success. [illegible]

BLEW OUT GAS, MAY NOT LIVE

Julius Snyder, a Russian Jew, immigrant, overcome by gas at No. 182 Bryant street early to-day, is in a critical condition at the Malden Hospital, while a companion, Matthew Adler, who was also affected by the fumes has only partialy recovered. Not familiar with the use of gas, Snyder blew out the light when he went to bed, without turning it off.

NEWS WAGON AIDS ILLUSION

At Wonderland one can see in safety and comfort, without any concern as to the person or property engaged, a most realistic scene of the beginning, the combat and the conquering of a fire, apparently in the square of a big city.

Viewed from the grand stand, it is seen to contain blocks of business houses, factories, hotels and private dwellings, with a circular park in the immediate foreground and thoroughfares radiating in all directions, alive with traffic. Vehicles of all descriptions, most noticeable a delivery wagon of the BOSTON AMERICAN, are driven through the streets.

With the opening of the show a rumble of wheels is heard in one of the side streets, and suddenly the BOSTON AMERICAN wagon is hurrying through the square with a young man in the rear selling the papers to the newsboys. Then the latest editions of the paper are on sale throughout the grounds and everybody who visits Wonderland Park wonders how the BOSTON AMERICANS can reach the resort so quickly, as the baseball and final edition is on sale at Revere almost as soon as at the Park street subway station.

ROOSEVELT'S UNCLE DEAD

NEW YORK, June 14.—Robert B. Roosevelt, uncle of President Roosevelt, and a prominent figure in national politics, died to-day at his country home at Lotus Lake, Long Island. Mr. Roosevelt, who was seventy-seven years old, had been in failing health since last Winter. He succumbed to a complication of diseases.

Unlike his distinguished nephew, Robert Roosevelt was a staunch Democrat, and was conspicuous in the councils of that party. He was United States minister to the Netherlands from 1888 to 1890, and during the second Cleveland campaign was treasurer of the Democratic National Committee. He served many times as a presidential elector. He was a great lover of out-of-door sport and an active promoter of societies for the protection of game.

Mr. Roosevelt was admitted to the bar in 1851, and after practicing for twenty years became a merchant, retiring some years ago. He was one of the first to expose the "embalmed beef" that was fed to the American soldiers during the Spanish-American war.

BRIBERY REPORT READY.

The report of the bribery investigating committee of the Legislature may be announced to-day.

DEFENCE IN PREUSSER CASE

UTICA, N. Y., June 14.—Prosecution in the Preusser murder trial required but a very brief time in which to present the case of the people, and the defence is now on. The evidence was all to the actual killing of Myles B. McDonnell of Boston by Preusser. Police Sergeant Lanahan testified that Preusser, after his arrest, said: "I have shot McDonnell; he did me a grievous wrong."

LAY PLANS TO GET MUENTER

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 14.—Erich Muenter, the Harvard instructor, wanted by the police for the murder of his wife, is in this city, and to-day extraordinary efforts to capture him were begun by the local authorities. A man who answers Muenter's description has visited the city twice within the last week, coming from some place a few miles out on the railroad, where it is supposed Muenter is in hiding.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JUNE 14, 1906.

Inspected Beasts and Inspected Men

A Typical "Civilized" Attitude. But Is it AMERICAN?

We have in the city of Washington what is called "a representative REPUBLICAN government."

Gentlemen sent to the Senate by trusts and gentlemen sent to the House of Representatives—a majority of them, at least, by money—are supposed to be interested in the public welfare and to legislate accordingly.

We call your attention to an interesting feature of these gentlemen's legislative ideas.

It is made clear—after seven or eight years of talking by this newspaper and others and seven or eight years of PRESENTING FACTS—that the Beef Trust has been engaged in poisoning the public with diseased or decayed carcasses of animals.

Something had to be done, under these circumstances, in spite of the fact that the national Congress contains more BEEF TRUST SENATORS AND REPRESENTATIVES than POPULAR Senators and Representatives.

Inspection was suggested. Wise legislators said that government officials must investigate each animal slaughtered. The public health must be protected somehow, and this seemed to be the way.

At best the inspection suggested must be more or less farcical. It would not prevent the selling of the diseased cattle IN THE STATE WHERE THEY MIGHT BE SLAUGHTERED.

But even so, the worthy, well-paid Beef Trust sycophants in Washington opposed the effort to keep ptomaines out of the national stomach.

And all of our representatives—including even President Roosevelt himself—agreed THAT THE PEOPLE MUST PAY FOR THE INSPECTION OF THE MEAT.

Now consider another kind of inspection.

There is a bill before the national Congress which pretends to be a bill "for the supervision and restriction of immigration."

It is really a bill concocted for the purpose of preventing the persecuted Jews of Russia and of other countries from coming to this country. Those who push the bill do not dare to say this, but that is what they have in mind.

Part of the scheme in this bill provides for "inspection" of arriving immigrants.

It is proposed to put a headtax on every immigrant coming to this country. One distinguished Massachusetts Senator wants to make the tax forty dollars for each person coming in. His idea is that "the land of the free and the home of the brave" should charge an admission—that it should attach a boxoffice and a cash register to the Declaration of Independence.

The excuse for this scheme is "the immigrants should pay what it costs to inspect them."

There you see the difference in the attitude which our government takes toward a human being desirous of living in a free country and the pork packer anxious to feed diseased animals to his fellowmen.

The consumptive cow offered as food to the American citizen MUST BE INSPECTED AT THAT AMERICAN'S EXPENSE. The people must pay the expense of keeping diseased meat out of their stomachs.

But when a man comes to this country, bringing his wife and his children—as all of our fathers and mothers came here originally—we suddenly develop a great streak of economy.

The people can afford to pay out of their own pockets the cost of inspecting a slaughtered hog. But they must compel the immigrant willing to work, useful, welcome and necessary, TO PAY A HEADTAX, OR INSPECTION TAX, ON HIS ARRIVAL AND THUS SAVE MONEY FOR THE PEOPLE.

Isn't it a beautiful illustration of the American lawmaking attitude toward the criminal rich man and the poor man willing to work?

The Meat Trust is CONVICTED of deliberately poisoning the people of this country.

It is denounced by the President of the United States as a criminal organization, guilty of shameful conduct. YET THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, IN ANOTHER MESSAGE, SAYS THAT THE PEOPLE MUST PAY WHAT IT COSTS TO STOP THE MEAT TRUST'S POISONOUS METHODS.

The honest, earnest human being coming from abroad, following in the footsteps of all Americans, is put on a lower plane than the diseased cow which the packer offers to the public. And that immigrant must pay a headtax to defray the cost of his inspection, while the people are taxed to prevent slaughter and sale of diseased animals by the trust.

I Will Fight for Principles —W. R. Hearst

Is for Bryan or Anyone Else Representing the Right Issues

Eagle Bureau, 608 Fourteenth street.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—A call will be issued soon for a meeting of the first State Convention of the new Independence Party. It will be held in Rochester the latter part of August, before either the Democratic or the Republican State Convention is convened. William Randolph Hearst will without much doubt, be nominated for Governor and a full State ticket put into the field.

The issues of the campaign will be practically the same as advocated by Mr. Hearst in the Mayoralty election last Fall, altered to suit State conditions.

Mr. Hearst will be an active figure in the presidential fight of 1908, when he will be found laboring for the popular measures with which he is so strongly identified, regardless of whether Mr. Bryan, Mr. Hearst or someone else is the Democratic candidate for President.

"My position with regard to the governorship is to-day just what it was a couple of months ago, when I made a statement to the Eagle," said Mr. Hearst at the Capitol to-day. "At that time I tried to make it plain that I have a positive distaste for office-holding, and that I was not in any sense seeking the governorship or any other public post.

"It is still my hope that the Independence party will nominate some one else for the governorship. I hope that a strong man, imbued with the principles of the party, will come forward and be nominated.

"I realize that a more bitter fight would be made against me by the corporate interests than against probably any other candidate. Because of this and of my personal dislike for holding public office, I have hoped that another candidate might be named. But if the members of the Independence party desire me to make the race for them I am willing to do so."

"Will you seek the indorsement of the Democratic party?"

"I will not seek any nomination or any indorsement," replied Mr. Hearst, with great emphasis.

"Of course, if I should be nominated for Governor, I would welcome the support of all citizens, Democrats or Republicans, who believe as I do. But there can be no compromise on the matter of principles. If I am nominated by the Independence party, it will be on a platform that expresses the principles I believe and I will make the campaign on that platform, and no other consideration will enter into the matter. There will be no deal or bargain made with the leaders of any political machine, but every one indorsing the sentiments of the Independence party will be invited to support its candidates."

"It has been reported that you have said to Representative Sulzer that if he got the Democratic nomination for Governor you would support him."

"That is an error," laughed Mr. Hearst. "Of course, I have said no such thing to Mr. Sulzer or anybody else. I expect to support the candidates of the Independence Party. Great care will be exercised in the selection of candidates. Our executive committee will meet twice a week for the purpose of examining the records of all persons mentioned as candidates for office this year. Because our ticket was made up hastily last Fall we made some errors in the selection of candidates, who turned out poorly. We will guard against repeating these mistakes this year."

Mr. Hearst was asked what he thought of the reports that Bryan was being boomed in order to head off a Hearst presidential movement.

"That's all right," he returned, good-humoredly. "I am for Bryan or anybody else for President, provided he stands for the right kind of principles. It is not a question of nominees so much as of principles. Of course, it is important that the nominee fits the principles. The fight now is for the control of the government.

"The great question is whether the poor shall exercise the control of government, which is their right, or whether the corporations, which have usurped that right, shall exercise the control.

"That is the real issue before the people. Municipal, State and National government have come under the control of corporate influence until they are wholly dominated by them. Even the judiciary is feeling these influences.

"By this I do not mean that public officers are always bribed by money. But they are influenced or controlled just as effectively by other means. The favorite method of controlling legislators is by securing the nomination and election to office of 'friends' of the corporations.

"Whatever the means of controlling them, the result is the same, whether the bribe is dollars or assistance in getting into office. The people are gradually awakening to a realization of these things. The whole drift is toward national house cleaning. That will be the issue in the campaign for Governor this Fall and for Pres- whole drift is toward national houseclean date for office this year or at any other time will have no effect on my active support of the cleaning up processes."

In referring to the plain language employed in his dispatch to the Indianapolis Star last Saturday, in which he paid his compliments to Taggart, McClellan, McCarren and others, Mr. Hearst said:

"Well, I merely said what I thought. I believe that the views of a public man ought to be made known to the people if they are demanded. If his views are made known, the people will know what to expect from him, and if he should be elected to office his intentions will not be matters of mystery to the public. Otherwise, the people can only learn the views of public men by bitter experience."

WHERE CAN WE GO?
I'LL TELL YOU. LET'S GO UP TO THE ZOO. HAVE YOU EVER SEEN THE ANIMALS?
THE ABSURD DARWINIAN THEORY THAT WE ARE DESCENDED FROM THE APE IS PRETTY WELL EXPLODED NOW. WHY I WAS TALKING WITH PROFESSOR-- ETC-ETC
REMEMBER LAST WEEK HOW MAD YOU GOT WHEN MR G. WHATAWAD CALLED YOU AN APE?
AH! THE KING OF BEASTS. ROYAL SPORT SHOOTING LIONS. I OFTEN REGRETTED THE FACT THAT I WAS TOO YOUNG TO GO TIGER HUNTING WHEN IN INDIA WITH OUR UNCLE. HE'S A SEA CAPTAIN Y'KNOW.
LET'S GO OVER AND SEE THESE SAVAGE - AH - ER - LEOPARDS. I HAD A THRILLING EXPERIENCE ONCE WITH ONE OF THESE BEASTS. IT WAS IN SOUTH AMERICA. THE CREATURE LEAPED AT ME BEFORE I HAD TIME TO AIM EVEN. BUT WITH RARE PRESENCE OF MIND, I SHOVED THE MUZZLE RIGHT DOWN HIS YAWNING MOUTH AND FIRED. HE FELL DEAD AT MY FEET.
AND YOU WASN'T A BIT AFRAID!
OH MY!
YES, YOU WOULDN'T THINK TO LOOK AT HIM, THAT HE WAS ONE OF THE MOST SAVAGE AND TREACHEROUS OF ANIMALS.
HE HAS RATHER A KIND EYE.
MY WORD!
TRUE, BUT YOU SHOULD SEE IT FLAME UP WHEN ITS TEMPER IS AROUSED.
SORRY LADIES TO SEE YOU MISINFORMED. BUT IT'S PARTLY OUR FAULT. YOU SEE, WE'RE CLEANING OUT THE CAGES, AND THE ANIMALS HAVE BEEN CHANGED AROUND A BIT. THAT'S A SOUTH AMERICAN TAPIR. HE REALLY IS VERY MILD, IF NOT MOLESTED TOO MUCH. THE LEOPARDS ARE IN THE NEXT CAGE.

THEY TELL WHAT THEY KNOW ABOUT ANIMALS

Dinkelspiel in Jungle Land

MEIN LIEBER SON, LOOEY—Ve haf receifed your letter from Mahanoy City, Pa., und your mother und me ve was glat to hear dot you haf prosperized so successively in der commercial trafeler pitzness.

Ve was sorry to hear dot you suffered a light indispositionment after eating some canned liverwurst in Shamokin, Pa.

You could awoid such misery, Looey, if you vould vatch der doings of der Beef Trust more comprehensively.

It is an open secret dot der Beef Trust abolished liverwurst ofer a year side. Your mother found in her samvich an ulterior motive vich turned ouid to be der lining of a straw hat, made in 1879; your Uncle Ludwig's vife drew a shoe lace and part of a red necktie, und Mrs. Truckenmuller cashed in two pants buttons und a rain check for a ball game in Chicago in 1886.

Of course, Looey, ve all must gif der Beef Trust credit for trying to be impartiality in der selection of substitutes for meat. At der same time, Looey, ven I sit [illegible] to lunch und fill up on chipped beef I like to be sure dot der Beef Trust has not cold-decked me. Und ven I find ouid fifteen minutes later dot der chipped beef hat on an understudy und I am ago, und replaced it mit shredded boot-heels und udder second-hand vegetables.

"I find ouid dot der chipped beef hat on an understudy."

Ve vas all vell at home mit der eggsception dot I took a chance on some canned pig's knuckle at your Uncle Oscar Schmittberger's a veek ago Tuesday, und for two miserable days I suffered mit profane poison.

Of course, Looey, I dink it is a fine idea for der Beef Trust to be progressive, und I haf no serious obcheckshun ven dey can up a few pairs of low-priced Scotch cheviot trousers und call it beef a la mode, but it hurts me in my family pride to sit at der dinner table und see der southeastern corner of an insulted doormat come to my plate disguised as a weal cutlet.

Ve was all vell at home mit der eggsception dot your mother vent down to Mrs. Charlie Skeezegeister's house to play bridge last Vendesday, und efer since den she has been troubled mit insomnia of der appetite on account of some canned roast beef samviches vich she fell for in a moment of veakness. Ven dose present vich hat partook of der samviches finally recofered deir presence of mind dey found dot der only place in der can vich contained any real roast beef vas der label on der ouidside now full of Navajo blanket, it makes me peevish.

Ve vas all vell at home mit der eggsception dot your leedle brother, Heiney, vent to a picnic last Thursday und among der udder dangerous sports vich he indulged in vas some Frankfurters, vich vas familiarly known as "dogs," because deir bark vas as bad as deir interior.

Leedle Heiney dallied mit two "dogs" und five minutes aftervards he leaned up against a newsstand und had writer's cramp in der stomach.

Vun of his playfellows suchchested dot der best cure vas a hair of der dog dot bit him, so dey opened a Frankfurter eggspecting to find it furnished on der interior like a $14 mattress.

Not such, however.

Dey found in dare nuddings but a bunch of pink transfers, not good for dis date, und a half-portion of rubber boot vich hat been treated chemically to deceive der appetite.

Ve haf all become wegetarians at our house, Looey, and ve vill live on splintered pickles und fumigated sauerkraut until der Beef Trust gets back to a meat basis.

Yours mit luff.
